STILL CONFIDENT.

Gen. Hancock Has Faith in His Success.

Full Returns from Indiana—The Democrats Working to Redeem the Hoosier State.

The Figures in Indiana.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., October 15.—Porter's plurality over Landers is 6,102. The figures for this are from ninety of the ninety-two counties in the State, and the two yet to come have been estimated as they were in 1876. It is possible the Republican gain in those counties will bring Porter's plurality up to 6,200. The Legislature stands a tie in the Senate and in the House fifty-seven Republicans and forty-three Democrats, giving the Republicans a majority on a joint ballot of fourteen. The Republicans have eight Congressmen and the Democrats five. Both sides recover slowly from the excitement, and the Democrats do not generally express their opinions. I know this much, that there is a rally all along the line, and that they will make a very vigorous and searching still hunt from now till November. They believe Hancock is stronger than Landers, and hope to carry the State. There is a good deal of bitterness and a disposition to quarrel, but the necessities of November are stopping that.

Hancock Still Confident.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 15.—The news that the Republicans had carried the State elections in Ohio and Indiana did not dishearten Gen. Hancock in the least. He was in good spirits yesterday and entertained his visitors with that frank cordiality which is one of his most prominent characteristics. When asked for an expression of his opinion in regard to the Ohio election, he said that he was not disappointed, as he had anticipated the result. Speaking of Indiana he further said that he hoped to get some dispatches from his friends in that State. He did not think the Republicans had a right to claim such a large majority in that State as had been presented in the figures telegraphed. Gen. Hancock thought that the Republican victory in the State election in Indiana was no good reason for believing that State would go Republican in the Presidential election. There were local issues at stake in Indiana which would have no effect in a national political contest. One of the gentlemen present said "Then you are not at all discouraged, General?" "I have not thought of being despondent," was the reply, with some warmth.

Too Good to Be True.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 15.—At a late hour last night the following dispatch was received by the Truth:

COLUMBUS, O., October 14.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Indiana has elected the Democratic State ticket and Landers will probably pull through. Publish this with my signature.

[Signed.] A. H. PURDY.

Address by the Democratic Executive Committee.

NEW YORK, October 14.—The Democratic National Executive Committee has issued the following:

To the Democratic and Conservative Voters of the Country: The election of President and Vice-President is now before you. State and local dissensions are eliminated from the issues of the day. The magnitude of a victory or defeat can only be estimated by the forces and means employed in securing it. By fraud and corruption the people of the country were defeated in their purpose in 1876, and the rightfully elected President was kept from office. With the combined capital of the Republican party, aided by repeated assessments upon an army of office-holders; with the power of the Federal Government, represented by United States Marshals at the polls; with intimidation, fraud and a resort to every corrupt appliance known to Republican methods, concentrated in two States, our adversaries have succeeded in procuring the probable return of their local candidates. Can it be possible that in every State throughout this broad land the same methods can be brought to bear that were used by the Republican managers in Indiana and Ohio? Can the great States of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, California, Colorado, Nevada and New Hampshire be bought, intimidated and defrauded? Even without the vote of Indiana, which we believe will be redeemed in November, with New York and New Jersey and the States that are conceded to us, including Maine, the election of our candidates is assured. The Republican party have put in nomination for President and Vice President two men who, by the admission of their own party and press, are unworthy of your confidence and your suffrages. It is impossible that 50,000,000 of intelligent and patriotic people will consent to place themselves upon the humiliating level thus prepared for them by the Republican managers.

Fellow-citizens, the first day's repulse at Gettysburg ended on the third with Hancock in the front in a glorious victory, and that victory secured us our Union. The question is not now the preservation of the Union, but of Constitutional Government. Hancock is now, as then, to the front. The repulse is now, as then, the omen of a victory which will secure to coming generations the inestimable blessings of civil liberty.

By order of the National Democratic Committee.

[Signed] WM. H. BARNUM, Chairman.

GOV. McCLELLAN.

His Splendid Speech to the Democracy of New Jersey.

TRENTON, N. J., October 15. Governor McClellan addressed the Democracy last evening. After a eulogy on Gen. Hancock, he said the Democratic party supported the South before the war, not because it liked slavery, but because it supported the Constitution. When the war came it opposed the South for a similar reason. Two things united the South before the war—slavery and anti-tariff. The former was dead and the South was fast becoming a manufacturing country. So the elements no longer exist there. "The Southern man is mortal," continued the Governor, "the same as we are, and all that has made the South solid is the pressure of Federal bands and carpet-bag Government. Remove that pressure and the South will cease to be solid. With regard to the war claims the Constitution forbids their payment, and I believe that not a man North or South favors their payment." He then explained why the tariff was enacted and said: Human ingenuity never invented any system of customs not necessarily protective. The Democrats, while in control of the Government, never took one step to interfere with the interests of the country. If he thought for a moment that his party would interfere with any productive interest he would not uphold it. He alluded to the three or four skirmishes which had been recently made and said that successes should be balanced with the results the same as in war. There was no cause for discouragement.

Indications.

For Lower Lake Region increasing cloudiness followed by light rains, falling followed by rising barometer, variable winds generally from southeast to southwest, and no change in temperature during rest of Friday. For Upper Lake Region falling, followed by rising barometer, increasing cloudiness, light rains, variable winds shifting to north and west, with lower temperature by Saturday morning. For Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys threatening weather and rain, followed by northerly and westerly winds, lower temperature and rising barometer during the night.

THE CHINE RANCHE OUTRAGE.

Arrest by a United States Marshal and Escape of the Prisoner.

OURAY, COL., October 15.—The Sheriff of Gunnison county, accompanied by a Deputy United States Marshal, went to the agency and arrested Agent Berry for the outrage at Chine's Ranche. The agent requested the Marshal to accompany him to the military camp to procure an escort for protection, as he was afraid that the people of Gunnison might avenge the death of Jackson as soon as he passed the line of the Reservation. The officer remained all night in the military camp, he and the agent occupying the same bed. During the night the agent gave the officer the slip and disappeared. The officer writes to Ouray that he will have the prisoner if it takes a year. The passengers arriving by coach report Cline and the Sheriff at Indian Creek on their way to Gunnison. The stage driver reports the employes at the agency badly frightened.

KILLED FOR A GIRL.

Shocking Murder This Morning at Jerseyville, Ill.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JERSEYVILLE, ILL., October 15.—A shocking murder occurred near Kane, Greene county, north of here, last night. Matt Mundy killed Jim Shirly in cold blood. Shirly and Nellie Wright were going to a dance at James Miller's. Mundy overtook them and tried to take the girl away, when, without provocation, he shot Shirley dead. He then shot at the girl and fled. The Coroner came down from Carrolton this morning to hold an inquest. The body was lying in a field near the railroad.

The Presidential Party.

NEWTACOMA, W. T., October 15.—The Presidential party left Pt. Townsend yesterday at 10 o'clock and passed out into Fuca Straits, where the swell from the ocean was quite severe. Several of the party were temporarily sea-sick, making great sport for the more fortunate ones. Utsalady, on Camano Island, was reached, where the Star tied up for the night. In the welcome of the people was pleasure and surprise, no intimation having been given that the President would visit them. Mrs. Hayes soon had the cabin full of children, to whom she distributed apples and dainties. All the party walked on the shore, where a squalid company of Indians were camped. Here they had an opportunity of seeing the noble red man in his most degraded state. The boat started at 7 o'clock, passed through Agate Pass and reaching Tocomo at 1 o'clock. Salutes were fired as the boat approached the dock, which was crowded with people. About 100 school children bearing flowers and moving arches were stationed so as to form a passage-way through which the party marched, the President and Mrs. Hayes shaking hands with each little one, and a public reception followed at the residence of Gen. Sprague, where the usual speeches were made by the President, Secretary Ramsey and General Sherman. The party left by a special train for Katuma at 5 o'clock.

RAILROAD PURCHASE.

The Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad has been purchased by Henry Villard, of New York, the transfer having been effected this morning, at which time formal possession was taken of the property by Gen. T. A. Tanot.

Protestant Episcopal Conference.

NEW YORK, October 15.—In the House of Deputies of the Protestant Episcopal Convention to-day the Committee on Constitutional Amendments reported on the resolution previously offered that it was inexpedient to change the period of the meeting of this convention from three to five years. The report was adopted and the committee discharged. The Committee on Prayer Books having considered the memorial on the revision of the Book of Homilies referred to them reported adversely to the petition and were discharged. Rev. Dr. Buell, of North Carolina, called up the resolution which originated at a previous convention in the House of Bishops, the subject matter of which had been before the Episcopal Church for upwards of thirty years.

The resolution calls for the insertion in the litany after the supplication to illuminate all bishops, priests and deacons and the response thereto. The supplication "that it may please thee, O, Lord of Hosts, to send for the laborers into the Hosts" and the response "We beseech Thee to hear us, hear us, Good Lord." Dr. Buel made a lengthy speech in favor of the adoption of the resolution, and upon concluding his remarks the subject was referred to the Committee on Prayer-book.

The Cotton Crop.

WASHINGTON, October 15.—The returns of October received at the Department of Agriculture give the condition of the cotton crop as 83, being a decline of 8 per cent. Compared with the returns received at the same time last year there is a gain of 2 per cent. The following is a summary of the reports by States: North Carolina, 42 counties give an average of 93 against 77 last year; South Carolina, 20 counties average of 87 against 82 last year; Georgia, 54 counties average of 88 against 77 last year; Florida, 12 counties, 88 against 81 last year; Alabama, 32 counties, 85 against 79 last year; Mississippi, 44 counties, 75 against 85 last year; Louisiana, 15 counties, 70 against 80 last year; Texas, 65 counties, 88 against 63 last year; Arkansas, 32 counties, 85 against 96 last year; Tennessee, 15 counties, 87 against 106 last year. The Atlantic States all report favorable weather, and the crops two weeks earlier than last year.

Grand Operatic Performances.

CINCINNATI, October 15.—The Cincinnati College of Music to-day publishes an official announcement of the week of opera to be given in February next under its auspices at the Music Hall on a scale of magnitude not possible in any theater in this country.

The Mapleson Troupe, reinforced with a chorus of three hundred from the May festival chorus of this city and with an orchestra of one hundred, are the forces. The operas chosen are "Moses in Egypt," "Lohengrin," "Fidelio," "Mefistofele," and the "Magic Flute." The Music Hall is to be filled up with temporary proscenium and scenery.

Accident to a Training Ship.

NEW YORK, October 15.—The Post's Washington special says the training ship Minnesota on its way from New York to Hampton Roads where she has gone to participate in the naval drill, struck on a sand-bar in the rough weather, carrying away part of her rigging. She keeled over dangerously and for a moment was in a most perilous situation. Great excitement prevailed for an instant, but the officers succeeded in preventing a panic and in extricating the ship from her danger.

Fatal Explosion.

TROY, N. Y., October 15.—At a Republican demonstration at Johnsonville last night Chas. Nutting, Mellie Welling, Chas. Thomas, John Fay and a Frenchman, name unknown, were injured by the explosion of a cannon. Nutting's leg was shattered and Welling's left arm torn to pieces. It has since been amputated. It is thought he will die. Thomas, aged eight—left leg torn to pieces—will probably die. Fay and the Frenchman were injured slightly.

AN ALMS-CHEST.

This fragrant box that breathes of India's balms
Hath one more fragrance, for it asketh alms;
But though 'tis sweet and blessed to receive,
You know who said—"it is more blest to give."
Give then—receive His blessing—and for me
The silent boon sufficient blessing be.

If Ceylon's Isle, that bears the bleeding trees,
With any perfume loads the Orient breeze,
If Heber's muse, by Ceylon as he sailed,
A pleasant odor from the shore inhaled,
More lives in me, for underneath my lid
A sweetness, as of sacrifice, is hid.

Thou gentle almoner! in passing by Smell of my wood, and scan me with thine eye.
I too from Ceylon bear a spicy breath
That might put warmness in the lungs of death;
A simple chest of scented wood I seem,
But oh! within me lurks a golden beam.

A beam celestial and a silver dim,
As though imprisoned angels played within!
Hushed in my heart my fragrant secret dwells;
If thou wouldst learn it, Paul of Tarus, tells;
No jangled brass, nor tinkling cymbal sound,
For in my bosom Charity is found.

BAGS OF MONEY.

Discovery in Indianapolis of an Heir to Vast Wealth.

From the Indianapolis News.

For the past week the friends and acquaintances of Mrs. Wm. M. French, of East North street, have been enjoying a social sensation—the discovery that she is one of the heirs entitled to the division of an immense estate. Readers of the News may have noticed going the rounds of the papers, for a week, a short paragraph alleging that the proper distribution of a fortune of $100,000,000 depended upon finding an old bible, containing an ancient family record, which is supposed to be, probably, concealed among cast-away rubbish in the garret of some Connecticut home. Mrs. French is, in all probability, one of the heirs to this immense fortune, though it is not at all certain that any of them will be able to make such proof of kinship as will satisfy an English court, even if the Bible is found.

The story is a romantic one and begins way back in colonial times, and is connected with one of England's wealthiest noblemen, Lord John Townley, of Lancashire. In 1727 there was born to this nobleman an only child, a daughter, whom he named Mary. Mary, like many another heir, could not bid her heart await the notions and emotions of the scions of aristocracy who flocked around her, but at an early age she gave it to a young weaver by the name of Williams. Of course her father forbade her marrying one so much beneath her in culture and social position, and, of course, Mary eloped and married the man she loved. They sailed for the colonies about the year 1770, and settled in Windham county, Connecticut. Here, the more effectually to conceal their whereabouts, they took the name of Stevens, dropping that of Williams. The man worked at his trade, remaining poor of course. They had nine children. Soon after the birth of the youngest, Stevens, for some cause, entirely abandoned his family, taking with him his family bible which contained the records of the Townley family, and that is the bible now so anxiously sought for. Soon after their abandonment by the father, whom tradition makes rather a shiftless mortal, the family assumed their real names. Williams, partly to get rid of the burden or odium of one who had proved himself utterly unworthy the woman he had abducted from a home of luxury and refinement. Mrs. Williams, as she was now called, lived to be sixty-four years old, and died in Pomfret, Conn., in 1791. Before her death she acquainted her youngest daughter with the romantic, not to say foolish, incidents of her life, but she seems to have taken no steps to preserve any evidence that might ultimately lead to an identification, or establish her right or the right of her children to the inheritance properly belonging to them.

It must be remembered that the war of revolution had interfered between the elopement of the girl and the death of the woman, widening every breach between the men and women of the colonies and the aristocracy which managed the war on the part of England. Mrs. Williams had been an intense whig, while her father had taken no ordinary part in the prosecution of the war against his own daughter as against all the colonists. Remembering the intensity of the hatred which the war had engendered against the aristocracy of England it is not to be wondered at that the girl who had defied her father's interference in her love affair, and with equal hateur had defied all England, would, even in old age, say that his estate might perish with him, and knew she died without providing for her children's inheriting what properly belonged to them.

Just how, after ninety years, the interest of these heirs, so long sleeping, has been revived, is not stated, nor is it necessary to be known. It is enough for the story to say that last Friday the mail-carrier delivered to Mrs. French a letter apprising her that she is one of the heirs to that $100,000,000, and asking her to furnish such proof of her heirship as may be in her possession. It would hardly be expected that she would have such documentary evidence, especially on the lost chapters of the romantic story, yet fortunately she has at least collateral evidence, which may corroborate other circumstantial evidence in the case. Her mother was a Williams, the daughter of John Williams, one of the sons, if not the only son, who lived to have children of Mrs. Mary Williams, nee Townley, of Lancashire, England. The mother of Mrs. French, the late Elizabeth L. Craft, was born in Fairfield county, Connecticut, September 25, 1789, two years before the death of her grandmother, the Townley-Williams through whom the family came. In addition to the record of this fact Mrs. French is in possession of much tradition, all bearing upon the identity of her mother's family with the William's family, that settled in Connecticut in 1770 or thereabouts. All along through life Mrs. Craft made frequent allusions to the elopement of her grandmother, or rather as the family tradition put it, her expulsion from home and disinheriting her because she chose to marry a weaver rather than the dissipated son of some neighboring nobleman whom the respective parents had selected for her husband, and she would often say that if she had her rights she would be wealthy. But perhaps the most remarkable coincidence, to call it by no other name, is the fact that only a few days before her death, as if the sun-set of life was giving her mystical lore, she entered into a detailed narrative of the family tradition, not only repeating the scraps that had become familiar, but mentioning many new features. Singularly enough, as it now appears, she gave Townley as the maiden name of her paternal grandmother, and said that her grandfather and her father were weavers, claiming for them the highest skill in the art, being especially famous for their woolen coverlets, some of which long remained in the family as heirlooms. Mrs. French attaches no importance to the fact with something like the solemnity of a seer, the old lady, as if oppressed with some coming event which casts its shadow before, said that the time would come and that not long hence, when the heirs of this woman who had been driven from a home of luxury by a heartless father, to labor and suffer in the new world, would inherit what of right belongs to them. Mr. French regarded the half prophesy as a thought begotten of a wish, and had almost dismissed it from her mind until the letter alluded to recalled it, and it is not strange that she now half believes that there may be something in it. Of course no pains or expense will be spared to see that the long-delayed fortune is properly distributed.

Salvini and the Pay of Actors.

From the New York Times.

Salvini gave, in a late conversation, as one great reason for the engagement of English-speaking actors to support him, during his forthcoming engagement in this country, the exorbitant demands of all the Italian players who had been asked to accompany him professionally. He said that his compatriots demanded four or five times as much as they were worth—and, presumably, ten times as much as they had been in the habit of receiving—the very moment that the name of America was mentioned. This disposition is by no means confined to Italians. French, German, even English performers of every kind insist on most exorbitant rates whenever an engagement in the United States is spoken of. It is not because they are unwilling, beyond their general dread of the ocean, to come to these shores—they all want to visit the Republic, but because they have an idea that ours is a land of universal wealth; that everybody is rich over here, or can be if he wishes; that thousands of dollars can as easily be paid as hundreds on this side the sea. Nor is it strange that they should think so. American managers have surely encouraged them in the error, for they make the most extravagant terms with them, and are continually advancing the terms. We have now a number of ordinary English actors on our stage who never dreamed at home of such prices as they are getting, and who, it is needless to say, are paid out of all proportion to their desert. We have never had from abroad any singer, player, dancer, lecturer, or musician who has not received what must have seemed to him or her fabulous figures. Jenny Lind, Fanny Elssler, Celeste, Sontag, Rachel, Ristori, Dickens, Rubinstein, Bernhardt, are old and fresh instances of the national prodigality. When Dickens' first offer was made to him it was the same that was repeated by other persons, and finally accepted; he declined it because it appeared preposterous to him that any such amount could be made out of his readings. American managers are often indignant and amazed at the outrageous demands of trans-Atlantic performers; but they have only themselves to blame therefor. If they had not humored their wildest whims, and aroused for years their excessive greed, they would have no cause for indignation or amazement. But now, as Salvini intimates, a mere reference to America excites the mercenary instincts of every European player who looks to be suddenly enriched for his generous condescension in visiting the new Dorado.

THE EX-EMPRESS.

Eugenie's New Home and New Grave-yard in Germany.

From the Paris Figaro.

The Empress Eugenie leaves England forever. She has decided to live in her chateau at Arenenberg. She will carry with her the remains of her husband and son. She has been deeply wounded by the decision of Parliament refusing to erect in Westminster Abbey the statue of the Prince Imperial. In vain the Queen of England, desirous to make reparation for this legitimate application, has determined to place a statue of the Prince in St. George's Chapel, in which are Prince Albert's tomb and the waving banners of the Knights of the Garter. The Empress hastens to banish herself from Chiselhurst—from that tearful home where she entered a dethroned sovereign, but still a wife and mother, and from which she goes a homeless and childless widow—a widow without fireside and without child.

Arenenberg is a small chateau picturesquely perched upon a hill above the Rhine at the mouth of the Lake of Constance. To arrive at the entrance gate, a bridge, edged on each side with hortensias planted by the Queen of Holland, is crossed. Since 1817, the time at which the Queen of Holland, under the name of the Duchess of St. Leu, established herself at Arenenberg, the chateau has undergone no change. All remains modest and country-like, as is suitable for the retreat of a woman who seeks forgetfulness of grandeur in rural repose and fears that luxury even will recall to her the past. You enter first in an ante-chamber rather narrow, around which wind the reception department, two saloons, a billiard and a dining-room.

The small salon and the billiard-room are arranged in the taste of the First Empire, all hung in blue and white ticking representing a tent. Mahogany furniture of antiquated style decorates the dining-room. A very fine portrait of Queen Hortense and portraits of Prince Louis and of the Bonaparte family are mingled among these pieces with some souvenirs of the youth of Napoleon III. The principal salon, arranged by the Empress with exquisite taste, has been copied from the Emperor's room at Camden House. An immense window in the English style, what we call a verandah, projects into a balcony on the Rhine, disclosing one of the most beautiful landscapes in the world. This place is a nest of flowers, a small museum of cherished "bibelots," recalling happy hours, Chinese curiosities from the boudoir of the Tuilleries, familiar objects having belonged to the Emperor or her son—a narrow space in which are held vanished joys, perished tenderness, all that is left of former times. The Princess Beatrice went to say farewell to the Empress. She stopped in the little cemetery of St. Mary to place a wreath upon the tomb of the Prince. Her great emotion struck the few spectators of this scene. Many persons maintain that the young Princess wept indeed for her betrothed.

A Swell.

Cor. New York Herald.

It may not be amiss to mention here the ludicrous sight a Japanese official presents in foreign evening dress. His trousers reach only to his ankles, his sleeves are too long by two or three inches, and his coat-tails come down below his knees. An old-fashioned opera hat, shaped more like a bell than anything else, and white cotton gloves, three or four sizes too large, complete the evening attire of a Japanese official and swell of the period. One gets the idea that the clothes must have been sent out in general shipment, and that every man had taken the first suit he could lay his hands on.

It requires but a short time for a young lady out shopping to learn all the countersigns of the dry goods trade.

French politeness: Mlle. X. waits one morning in vain for the arrival of her old music teacher. At last his little daughter makes her appearance in his stead and says: "Mamma sends me to say that she hopes you will excuse papa from coming to give his lesson this morning, because he's dead."

"Adolphus, my dear," said she, "it's nearly a year since you began to call." "Yes, I believe so," nervously. "And we've talked about books and music every night." "Y-y-e-s, I think so, more nervous than before. "Well, I, I—Don't you think a change would be agreeable?" There was "a change" in a few weeks' time. The pastor made it.

KIDNAPPED AND MURDERED.

A Crime in Holland Resembling the Charlie Ross Case Here.

London Cor. New York Sun.

A crime resembling the Charley Ross case in Philadelphia has just been committed in the quiet capital of Holland. On September 23, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, a handsome and well-dressed young man called in a carriage at the normal school of a M. Bouscholte, on the Koningenne Gracht, at the Hague, and asked for a boy of thirteen years of age, named Marius Boogardt, for whom, the stranger said, his parents had sent. The principal of the institution, seeing the boy knew the visitor, permitted him to quit the school. The boy took his cap, and gladly availed himself of his teacher's permission. On entering the cab the lad inquired of his escort "whether his mamma had not gone to Schevingen." "Yes," replied the latter, perceiving that the boy was informed of his mother's intended movements; "but we are to wait for her at a certain peasant's house on the dunes, which she will pass on her return." The woman, however, had changed her mind, and had remained at home.

One hour later, school being over and the boy not having put in his appearance, his mother sent for him, when she learned that the boy had left with some one who claimed to have been detailed by her for the purpose of taking him home. Alarmed by this revelation, the lady at once set in motion the police, and active search was instituted. In the meantime a letter arrived to the address of her husband and bearing The Hague postmark, which announced to the distressed family that the boy Marius had been kidnapped, but would be restored on payment of 75,000 florins in bank notes if a female messenger was sent for him to a spot not very clearly designated. The letter stated furthermore that the boy was held as a prisoner and kept without food, and that he would be killed immediately if the police were informed.

On the morning of the 25th one of the rural constabulary found in a clearing on the road to Loosduinen the lifeless body of young Boogardt. The hands and feet were tied and his head lay on his school-bag. He had been strangled, and had received seven stabs from a dagger, one of which was mortal. Beside the body lay a paper, on which was written: "The 75,000 florins were only a pretext. It is vengeance that I want. All is not finished yet." Of the murderer there is no trace. On the afternoon of the same day the hackman who had driven the visitor to the school was discovered, but he gave no information of any service toward establishing the identity of the criminal. He had scarcely caught a glimpse of him when at the gate of the city he had dismounted and paid the fare. The vessels in the harbor about to sail were stopped and searched, but nothing could be discovered about the man. Suspicion had been directed toward a dismissed man servant of Mr. Boogardt's, who, on leaving his situation, had been heard to use threatening language. A reward of 2,000 florins was offered for his apprehension, and, on the 27th, he was found and arrested in a house of bad repute at Amsterdam. This man, Hendrick Poulviquet, was taken to The Hague and confronted with the different persons who had seen him at the school and on the dunes with the boy on the day of the murder. These witnesses all declared that there was no resemblance between the prisoner and the criminal. Poulviquet was therefore discharged.

A cable dispatch to the Telegram says that one William Marianus Jongh, a clerk to the Minister of the Colonies, of which the boy's father was formerly Secretary-General, has been arrested on his own confession, made to his sister. He said that when they arrived on the dunes he sought a quiet place where he threw the boy on the ground and bound his hands and feet with cord. "Remain here," he said to Marius, "till I return with the money I have demanded from your father. Stop your crying if you do not want to be killed." He covered the youth with his coat and started to go, but the boy cried so loudly that he returned. Fancying he heard footsteps, he took his sword out of his walking stick and killed the child, stabbing him seven times in the breast. He then fled to Schevengen, washed his hands at the seashore, and returned to The Hague, after having thrown away his sword-stick in a little channel by the roadside.

After this avowal of his crime his sister asked him what motive he had for the horrible deed. He answered:

"I saw our father die in poverty. As for myself I could not make my way in India, but I had a place in the same office where father worked, with no better prospects than he had. What could be my mother's lot and yours? I wished to assure to her a comfortable old age, and when I heard from a family who are acquainted with his circumstances that Mr. Boogardt was a very rich man, I was seized with a desire to constrain him to give me money by stealing away his only son. I didn't intend to kill the child except in case he should possibly become my accuser. My only motive was my desire for money. Nobody assisted me either before or at the murder."

A Horse on a Railroad Trestle.

From the Milwaukee Wisconsin.

The freaks of drunken men take turns that surprise everybody, themselves included. The newspapers chronicle many of these insane freaks, but none more sensational than the performance of James Streden, an employe of the Bay View Rolling Mills, last evening. James had been up at West Bend attending a gathering of friends, and in driving his one horse buggy through the city toward Bay View last night switched off from Kinnickinnick avenue in the Twelfth Ward and took the St. Paul Railway track to cross the Kinnickinnick River on the railroad bridge. The bridge has for a bottom only ties placed about twenty-two inches apart, and the task of walking across on a dark night like that of yesterday is quite a ticklish one even for a sober man. For a horse, and especially for a horse controlled by a drunken driver, the task is well nigh impossible. Streden, however, was not sober enough to take in a greater fact than that a bridge lay before him and must be crossed. Therefore, when his horse hesitated for a moment he applied the whip, and the noble animal commenced his perilous trip across on the bridge ties. Cautiously and very slowly the horse felt its way step by step until he had nearly completed one-half of the distance across when the drunken man became impatient and struck the animal with his whip. A false step, a stagger, and a final plunge told the story of the horse's drop of fifteen feet into the water below. The wrench and snapping of the harness and thrills threw Streden out, and he, happily, followed the horse into the chill waters of the muddy river. Officer Weisner and Mr. Davidson heard the double splash, and ran to the river in time to see the horse swim out and clamber up an incline to the dock, while Streden, now nearly sober, was making efforts to keep his head above water. To draw the man to the horse was but the work of a moment, when it was found that he suffered some scratches and bruises; but with the inexplicable luck of drunken men, he had no bones broken, and had suffered no internal injury. The buggy, which remained lodged between ties on the bridge, was the most used-up member of the trio, and was removed before the next train was due.

Mr. Fawcett on Cramming.

From the London Truth.

Artificial cramming being the besetting sin of American education, some remarks recently made by the English Postmaster-General, blind Mr. Facwett, can be studied most profitably by parents and teachers. "Too much reading and not enough thought!" was his exclamation, after dwelling upon the evil effects of attempting to cram the mind with more than it can hold. He did not think it would be fair to throw the entire responsibility of this on teachers. Their better judgment was often controlled by the parents, who wished their children to be taught an unlimited number of things in a very limited period. If parents would let their children remain longer at school, and be taught a few subjects more thoroughly, the result would be generally very much more satisfactory. The idea of valuing knowledge only for its money's worth in after life was to be guarded against. The chief object was to train the mind. Very often what was learned at school was of no practical value afterward, and yet it formed a valuable course of mental training. He could say this from his own experience with regard to the study of mathematics. The best test of the skill of a teacher was the extent to which he was able to discover what was the best subject to develop the faculty of each individual pupil. Nothing could be a greater mistake than for a young man who had gained a little more education than his father to leave his handicraft to seek employment as a clerk. Such a course was doubtless sometimes taken in the following of an idea that his own social position would be improved; but if society could fairly be held responsible for such folly, he was afraid it would have to answer for thousands being encouraged to seek employment where that employment was most difficult to be obtained.

Invalids in Exile.

From the London Standard.

We talk a great deal of the effect on the physical health of children of rearing them in India or any other hot climate. We scarcely think enough, perhaps, of the moral consequences of bringing them up in the disconnected, irresponsible, dutiless sort of existence inevitable in a Mediterranean villa. It would be both cruel and useless to make these remarks with a view to urging those who have once established for themselves the custom of a winter in the South to remain now in the land of the fogs and frost. How many of them are going away reluctantly with heavy and aching hearts, this very week, it would be hard to estimate. How many men are relinquishing the hopes of success in honorable professions, and retreating into what they feel will be a scarce endurable idleness and banishment? How many beloved young wives and mothers are torn away, leaving all that made life dear behind them in the charge of others, and feeling in their sorrowful hearts that they would rather die in their English homes with their children around them than go forth on the chance of preserving a life henceforth of little joy or use? How many, both men and women, are preparing to start with the one human being on whom their souls seems to hang, and who, throwing to the winds every selfish consideration, are thinking only whether that most precious life may yet at any cost be saved? Infinite are the griefs, countless the tears, which this sad season brings in our land every year. There is no help for it. Our climate is bad, and there are better ones within reach; so the sickly and the frail must seek those brighter shores, and love must follow them wheresoever they go.

Peasant Homes in Germany.

From the Independent.

But, even when remembering all the faults of the Fatherland, an American can scarce help pitying the emigrants when he sees the pretty, home-like houses they give up for the miserable shanties that await them in the West. In middle and southern Germany the isolated farm-house is the exception. Here the traveler is seldom, if ever, oppressed with the utter desolation, the grinding lowliness of peasant farm-life. The owners of adjoining farms build their houses in a group, and then go off to cultivate their out-lying land. Some work-days may thus be lost, but many a social evening is gained. Then the home in itself is far pleasanter than our ordinary farm-house. The buildings, with their tiled or thatched roofs, are picturesque, and they always have an appearance of cleanliness and thrift. Every window—this is characteristic of all German homes, high and low—is neatly curtained and decorated with plants and flowers. The little door-yards are nicely, if not tastefully, laid out and planted. A German front yard is a miracle. It is exquisitely neat and is fresh and cosy; but to the extreme—Dutchy, as we would say. Be it but ten feet square, it is laid out in many precise little plots, and filled to overflowing with well-trimmed and various gaudy flowers, has a quaint ornament or two, and then a silver ball usually beams its effulgence upon the whole from its lofty pedestal. The striking contrast that the unkempt western farm-house and garden forms with all this none but those who have seen both can realize. But, though the emigrants may miss their pretty homes, they will find the new world far ahead of the old in many particulars.—[Independent.

He Paid His Five Thousand Dollars.

San Francisco Bulletin Boston Letter.

But here comes one of my favorites. Isn't she fine looking? No? Well, listen while I tell you her story, and learn why I like her looks. Some years ago a man who had more money than good reputation advertised that he would give $5,000 to any respectable white woman who would walk unveiled from the Adams House entrance down Washington street with him at an hour when all the fashionables were promenading. For weeks that offer remained untaken, for his reputation was such that no respectable woman would be seen with him, and the advertisement had said "that none othess need apply." Finally, this woman who had just passed us agreed to his terms and to join him at the appointed place and time. When the hour came Mr. —— was on hand. Soon a carriage drove up with the lady. It had been noised abroad that the offer had been taken up, and quite a crowd had gathered to see him pay his $5,000. He helped her alight, offered her his arm, walked a few steps with her, when she removed her veil at his request and revealed a face as black as night. "You have deceived me," he said, this is not fair." "I am not a darky," she replied, and to prove it she pulled off her gloves and showed a pair of hands as white as yours are this minute. The man turned toward the carriage, paid her the $5,000, and she drove off leaving him to the bystanders. It turned out afterward that the girl was very poor, and that she had a magnificent voice she could not cultivate for want of money, and this is the way she overcame that obstacle. She went to Europe and studied five years, and returned one of our most brilliant singers.

Mr. Lorillard's New Horse.

From the New York World.

Mr. Pierre Lorillard received dispatches yesterday from his agents in London informing him that they had purchased the French bred stallion Mortemer, by Compiegne, dam Comtesse. He was foaled in 1869 and was fairly successful on the turf, winning the Ascot gold cup in 1871, carrying 131 pounds. His progeny first appeared in England in 1875, his daughter Suzette proving a winner. In 1876 Chamant and Verneuil made their debut. In 1877 Clementine and St. Christophe ran with success in England, while in 1878 it will be remembered that Vermeuil, then a four-year-old, won the Queen's Vase Gold Cup and Alexandra Plate all at Ascot in one week, and as nearly all the get of Mortemer have proved winners both in England and in France, it is to be hoped that the horse will arrive safe in this country and that he will live many years and have better luck at Rancocas than Glenlyon, whose place he is intended to take. For in-breeding Mortimer cannot well be excelled. His sire Compiegne was by Fitz Gladiator, by Gladiator out of Maid of Hart, by Provost, while Comtesse, the dam of Mortemer, was by the Baron or Nuncio, out of Eusebia, by Emilius.

God Bless the Ladies!

From the Chicago Times.

It's well it's over in Indiana, for lovely woman herself was running riot with the excitement of the canvass. A correspondent recites that "in one door-yard stand a number of ladies performing with brass and string instruments as a band. One has on a calico dress with red spots and blue and white trimmings; another wears a skirt of pink and a paper cap of blue adorned with white stars; the next wears against a dress of dusty muslin a stomacher representing the shield of the Republic, and still another—heaven save the mark—is hoisted upon the gate-post, where she personates, with a speckled fool's-cap and bedraggled blue skirt reaching to the walk beneath, the Goddess of Liberty. Her flag has somehow got entangled in a bush beside the fence, and as we thunder by her an anathema rises above the sound of hoofs, wheels and instruments: 'Burn my cats, ef I don't yank ye up by the roots to-morrer, ye durned eternal demonish thing!'"

FAR OUT IN THE WEST.

I am poor; I am shabby; there's something about me
That fellows in broadcloth will look on askance;
The maids in their soft flowing flounces will doubt me,
And sneer if I offer my hand in the dance.
But when I am sad, there's a vision that cures
me,
And lightens the heart that has sunk in my breast;
In daylight and darkness it ever allures me;
A jolly log cabin far out in the West—
A shabby log cabin, a shaky log cabin,
A jolly log cabin far out in the West.

Then ho! for the land where the sunset is glowing!
Good-by to the town with its perils and woe!
Where forests are waving and broad rivers flowing,
There is room for a fellow whose pockets are low.
It is there in my fancy, whatever befalls me,
It shows me the joys that are purest and best.
Ah! sweet is the vision that ever enthralls me;
A jolly log cabin far out in the West—
A shabby log cabin, a shaky log cabin,
A jolly log cabin far out in the West.

Who cares for the scorn of the city's proud daughters,
Where fashion and folly together agree?
There is one who will dwell by Missouri's fair waters,
And wait at the wash-tub for love and for
me.
The sounds that I hear are the voices of childhood,
The crow of old chanticleer doing his best;
The home of my heart is a home in the wildwood,
A jolly log cabin far out in the West—
A shabby log cabin, a shaky log cabin,
A jolly log cabin far out in the West.

I am poor, but I'm honest. The fetters that bind me
Will fall in the West like dead leaves from the tree;
A prince on the prairie the future shall find
me,
As proud as the eagle, as wild and as free.
What words shall I borrow to tell of my rapture?
When eve warns the hunter of home and of rest,
With a gun on my shoulder, a deer as my capture,
I'll ride to the cabin far out in the West—
A shabby log cabin, a shaky log cabin,
A jolly log cabin far out in the West.

AN EARLY PASSENGER.

Reminiscences of the First Steamboat Trip up the Hudson.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

On Friday evening the Rev. F. R. Freeman celebrated the fifty-fourth anniversary of his wedding, at his residence, No. 157 Livingston street. There were present the venerable clergyman and his wife; Dr. J. N. Freeman, a son man, and Mrs. Freeman, of 80 Hanson place; Mr. James Freeman, another son, Mrs. Freeman and the Misses Freeman, of Bloomington, Ills.; Mrs. Lucy E. Taxis, of Norris, Ill.; Mr. Acland Boyle and Mrs. Boyle, another daughter, late of Washington; Dr. Bigelow and Mrs. Bigelow, Mr. Campbell, Mrs. Campbell and Miss Campbell, of Brooklyn, and others. A pleasant hour was spent in congratulations and social converse, after which the guests repaired to the dining room and enjoyed an ample collation.

It transpired last evening that Rev. Mr. Freeman is the only surviving passenger of the Clermont, the first steamboat which ever went up the Hudson to Albany. He is the youngest and last surviving of thirteen children. His father, Elisha Freeman, was a sea captain before he became a farmer and was invited to go on board the Clermont with his wife and son. Robert Livingstone, who at one time was the American Ambassador at Paris, furnished Robert Fulton with funds to build the Clermont in 1807. Her length of keel was 140 feet and her beam sixteen and a half feet. She was trim and handsome with the exception of her boilers, machinery and smokestack, which were rude, cumbrous, and of formidable dimensions. The side-wheel was also a clumsy affair, with twelve huge paddles, held in place by a ring half way between their extremities and the hub. They sent the water splashing over the deck at every revolution. The top of the smoke-stack was thirty feet above the deck, nearly as high as the two masts, from the rear one of which floated the stars and stripes. Mr. Freeman was an infant at the time and does not pretend to recollect, except as a dimly indistinct dream, anything about the steamboat's first trip, but constant rehearsals of the scenes and incidents, made to him in his youth, have vividly impressed the whole event on his memory. Hours before the steamboat started, a multitude assembled along the North River to witness the expected inglorious ending of what was generally known as "Fulton's Folly."

"God help you, Bobby," cried one.

"Bring us back a chip of the north pole," cried another.

"A fool and his money are soon parted," cried a third.

Fulton, with a confident smile, went on superintending preparations for the start. Smoke issued from the stack. The hawsers were hauled in. The sidewheel quivered and slowly revolved. Fulton himself, with his hand on the helm, turned her bow to the stream. He was pale, but confident and self-possessed. The Clermont moved into the river. The ponderous machinery thumped and groaned, the wheel frantically clasped the water, and the stack belched like a volcano. But the vessel moved, and those on board waved their hats and gave a cheer. Those on shore followed suit, and sent up a mighty shout. The hitherto incredulous and jeering populace of New York were the first to do Fulton honor. And so the Clermont steamed away up the Hudson and passed out of sight, amid the prolonged and noisy acclamation of the multitude. This was on September 15, 1807. Thirty-six hours afterward, on September 17, she reached Albany. She had stopped, however, at the residence of Chancelor Livingston on her way up. Her speed was five miles an hour.

As may well be believed, her appearance on the river startled the crews of passing vessels. Few of the skippers, in those days of slow mails and no telegraph, could have been prepared to encounter such a mysterious object. It was at night, however, that the Clermont created her greatest effect. Her appearance spread consternation and terror on all sides. It was very dark and the fires were fed with dry white pine wood, and this, when stirred, sent up columns of flame and sparks from the mouth of the tall stack. This floating volcano, moving steadily through the darkness up the middle of the river, accompanied by the rumbling and groaning of the machinery, intensified by the silence all around, was calculated to alarm and strike terror into the souls of the sailors on board the sloops and other craft coming down with grain and farm produce. They had never heard of any motive power for ships except wind, and were, moreover, extremely superstitious.

"My father told me," said Mr. Freeman, "that whole crews fell upon their knees and besought divine Providence to protect them from the terrible monster that was marching on the tide, lighting up its pathway with fire."

Mrs. Freeman, the mother of the Rev. F. R. Freeman, saw a workman emerging from the engine-room—a place very suggestive to her of the infernal regions—carrying in his hand a ladle full of molten lead. With this he stopped up the holes here and there in the machinery where the steam was escaping. Capt. Freeman was informed that the man had been doing the same thing ever since the Clermont left New York. The people of Albany had been informed of the coming of the steamboat, and the whole town turned out to receive Robert Fulton and his wonderful vessel. They gave both an enthusiastic reception. After a short stay at Albany, the Clermont returned to New York, making the trip in thirty-four hours.

"When the Erie canal was opened," he says, "I was in Worcester, Otsego county, where I was born, and I recollect all the particulars of the affair, which happened in 1825. The canal ran from Buffalo to Albany, opening water communication between the cities of Buffalo and New York. At intervals of ten miles all along the route were placed cannon which were captured by Perry in the battle of Lake Erie. On the opening day, just as the gayly-decorated packet-boat containing a party of guests, including Gov. De Witt Clinton, started from Buffalo on a trip to New York, the cannon at the former city were fired, and this was followed by the firing of other cannon all along the line, until the last report sounded from the Manhattan gun. The excursion boat bore this legend: "This day the trophies of Perry's victory bear glad tidings from the lakes to the ocean."

Mr. Freeman was a pioneer preacher in the West for forty-nine years, twenty-five in Ohio, and almost as many in Illinois.

An Exasperated Mother.

From the Washington Post.

An unusual scene was witnessed in the Equity Court-room yesterday on the hearing of the habeas corpus case for the possession of the child William Edgar Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson P. Thomas. The child was placed by his father in the care of a grown-up daughter by his first wife, Mrs. S. R. Gittings. The writ was sued out for its recovery on the spur of a family quarrel. Before a final hearing was had, Mrs. Thomas, who is a young and pretty woman, took the child by force, and a rule for contempt of court was issued against her. She was in court with the child yesterday, as was her elderly husband. He, through his counsel, relinquished the effort, being content to let the child remain where he had placed it. On this, Judge Cox directed the dismissal of the writ and the delivery of the child to Mrs. Gittings. Mrs. Thomas appeared greatly surprised and incensed at this action of her husband, and tried to take up the case in his stead, but this could not be allowed. The next thing was the transfer of the child, which Mrs. Thomas held a tight, but apparently not very willing captive. Mr. W. A. Malloy, the court-crier, and a Deputy United States Marshal, was directed to carry out the mandate of the Judge. Mrs. Thomas resisted this, and a fierce struggle ensued between the mother and Mr. Malloy for its possession. The former, being a very gallant man, would probably have been worsted had not Deputy Cass come to his assistance. Between them they managed to separate the two, much to the joy of the child, who ran to Mrs. Gittings, whom it embraced affectionately. Mrs. Thomas then transferred her attention to her spouse, whom she floored by a blow on the head. The latter sued out a petition for a habeas corpus in her own name, on which a writ, returnable Saturday next, was granted.

Cigars Lighted With Greenbacks.

From the Baltimore Sun, Oct. 12.

Mrs. Emma Simms, residing at No. 1325 Fifth street Northwest, Washington City, but stopping in Baltimore, dropped a packet of notes, amounting to $1,390, from her pocket on North Gay street, near Dallas street, about 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The money, somewhat scattered about, was picked up by Mr. John Myers. He remembered that it was the day of the grand procession, and looked upon the shower of greenbacks as a sham or some advertising delusion; he at once resolved to make it a complete give-away, and handed around the money to all who desired it with an abandon beautiful to behold. Scenes that were ludicrous in the extreme ensued, though their ending was serious. The idea of Mr. Myers took readily and five cent cigars were coolly lighted with twenty dollar notes, nearly all the money being in notes of that denomination. Street gamins pasted a few around on awning posts to deceive unsuspecting strangers. A boy sold one twenty dollar note for 25 cents, and it is said $500 additional were sold for the same amount. A lady, residing not far away, got a twenty dollar note, which she said she would keep in memory of the great celebration. A friend begged her for it that she might frame it and keep it, and the lady gave it to her. Mrs. Simms meanwhile informed Officer Gibson of her loss. He hastened to the spot and managed to recover $450 of the amount, among it the twenty dollar note gotten by the lady mentioned above. The discovery of the facts caused consternation among those who had so freely made away with what they believed to be bogus treasure, and much regret was expressed for the loss sustained by Mrs. Simms. The case is decidedly one of the most singular on record.

How Chickens Get Out of Shells.

From the American Farm Journal.

Take an egg out of a nest on which a hen has had her full time, carefully holding it to the ear; turning it around, you will find the exact spot which the little fellow is picking on the inside of the shell; this he will do until the inside shell is perforated, and then the shell is forced outward as a small scale, leaving a hole. Now, if you will take one of the eggs in this condition from under the hen, remove it to the house or other suitable place, put it in a box or nest, keeping it warm and moist, as near the temperature of the hen as possible (which may be done by laying it between two bottles of warm water upon some cotton or wool), and lay a glass over the box or nest, then you can sit or stand, as is most convenient, and witness the true modus operandi. Now watch the little fellow work his way into the world, and you will be amused and instructed as I have often been. After he has got his opening, he commences a nibbling motion with the point of the upper bill on the outside of the shell, always working to the right (if you have the large end of the egg from you, and the hole upward), until he has worked his way almost around, say with one-half of an inch in a perfect circle; he then forces the cap or butt end of the shell off, and then has a chance to straighten his neck, thereby loosening his legs somewhat, and so, by their help, forcing the body from the shell.

The Teeth of the Ancient Greeks.

From the London News.

One of the most remarkable features of the discovery of the band of Thebans who fell at Chæronea is that, according to the report, all the teeth of each member of the sacred band are sound and complete. Either these gallant patriots were exceptionally lucky, or the condition of teeth in old Greece was enviably different from that of later and more degenerate days. The Romans were well acquainted with the evils that attend on the possession of bad teeth and had some considerable knowledge of the use of gold in counteracting these evils. If we remember rightly, an exception to the rule of not burying precious objects with departed Romans was made in favor of the gold that had been used for stopping teeth. We moderns may compare favorably with the Romans in the skill of our dentists, but we cannot pretend to rival the defenders of Thebes in their superiority to the necessity for these gentlemen. Rare indeed are the happy mortals of to-day who can boast that their teeth are in the perfect condition that nature intended, and that the craft of the dentist has never been employed upon them. It would be a difficult task to select from our army, or any modern army, 300 men with teeth as sound as those of the Theban warriors are reported to be.

Woolly Elephants in New York.

From the New York Tribune.

Two "woolly" elephants of diminutive size arrived in this city Wednesday on the steamer Oxfordshire from Singapore. They were the property of Capt. Jones, of that vessel, who has sold them to Charles Reiche, an importer of animals. A Tribune reporter saw the animals at No. 55 Chatham street yesterday. They are the first of their species ever brought to this country. The larger of the two is less than thirty-six inches high, while the smaller scarcely measures six inches in height. They are thought to be about six years old. The chief peculiarity of these elephants is the fact that they are covered with a thick black wool or hair, especially about the crown of the head, the back, and the legs. The wool is two or three inches long.

"Prince" and "Sidney"—for thus they were named by the crew of the Oxfordshire—are natives of the Malay Peninsula. Although other elephants have been caught, they have invariably succumbed when taken from the bleak mountain ranges to the warmer plains. Hence the fact that this species is generally unknown, and mentioned by but few naturalists.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keene as Hamlet.

A large audience assembled in the Grand opera-house last evening to witness Mr. Thomas W. Keene's Hamlet. Much interest was taken in this effort of the tragedian, and we are not in the least exaggerating when we say that Keene's portraiture of the melancholy Dane was a genuine surprise even to his most ardent admirers. Mr. Keene's delineation was drawn with no uncertain hand; it was bold, free, natural and full of vitality. It was a living Hamlet, a Hamlet of flesh and blood in whose fate the spectators unconsciously became absorbed. While in the main following the traditional rendering, Keene infuses into his assumption a force and individuality distinctively his own. His conception of the Danish Prince was essentially that of a man and not the embodiment of a psychological puzzle whose words and actions are unsolvable for ordinary humanity. A feature of the personation was its healthy vigor and intense but suppressed energy. The effects were all obtained in a purely legitimate manner, and Keene displayed remarkable judgment in his rendition. There was more tragic pathos in his concentrated passion than in the outburst of vehement declamation. We like his Hamlet even bettter than his Richard III. The excellence of his elocution, the distinctness of his enunciation, the delicate but firm shading of the text, the artistic repose of his gestures, all were striking proofs of Mr. Keene's greatness as a legitimate actor. We believe Mr. Keene's Hamlet will eventually become one of his finest roles. Miss Henrietta Vaders evoked a spontaneous outburst of applause by her splendid acting as Ophelia, especially when suffering from madness. Miss Vaders at one bound has established her reputation as an actress. The remainder of the support was fair. To-night "Othello." Keene as Iago.

Pope's Theater.

Alice Oates and the Favorites are doing an excellent business at Pope's Theater in Long Branch. It is a geniously good piece and the specialties are all good.

Olympic.

Robson and Crane in "Sharps and Flats" are simply inimitably humorous. The fun never flags when either of these actors is on the stage. They are unsurpassable as comedians.

Dubuque Times, 14: The Annie passed down Tuesday night. The Josie went up last evening. The Tidal Wave and Mary Morton will be down to-day and Victory up.

Good shipping facilities are now offered to Cairo, Paducah and all way points. We have Gen. Rucker, Capt. Bunting and the E. H. Durfee, Capt. Bruner, leaving to-morrow afternoon.

This astonishing item appears in the Sioux City Journal: The Key West, formerly of the Coulson Line, has been sold to a St. Louis man, and is running from St. Louis in the bayou trade.

The superior and popular steamer Josephine, Capt. B. A. Congar, will leave for Dubuque and St. Paul this evening. She has the usual excellent accommodations, and a pleasant table to sit at.

Low water between St. Louis and Cairo seriously interferes with and lessens the value and profits of the New Orleans barge system, and the late advance in prices of grain combine to paralyze the trade. The Iron Mountain and barges are understood to be "laid up" at present.

The Sunbeam, a propeller, has entered the Lower Coast trade from New Orleans. Since her return from the lake she has received a new Neafie & Levy wheel; the extension boiler-deck has been cut away and the stairway moved to larboard side, and a stage-derrick has been put up midship.

Natchez Democrat, 12: The Fred. A. Blanks came down at 6 p. m. yesterday with 1,200 bales of cotton and 6,700 sacks of seed. She received at this point 135 bales of cotton. This is the Blanks' last trip in the Bends trade, satisfactory arrangements, with concessions on both sides, having been agreed upon between Capt. Tobin and Blanks.

The Far West, Capt. H. J. King, arrived on Tuesday from her double trip to Pierre. On account of the high wind over four days was occupied in the down trip. On Friday she met the Fontenelle above Red Cloud, the Benton at the head of Big Bend and the Josephine at Fort Hale. On Saturday the Big Horn was met at Hot Springs. On Sunday the Niobrara was passed taking on a load at Running Water, and the Western met below Yankton Agency. On Monday the ferryboat Jim Leighton was met at Burbank. The Far West brought down about seventy-five passengers, mostly for Yankton.

The N. O. Democrat says of a new gulf line: The steamship Lucy P. Miller cleared yesterday for Belize, British Honduras, and other points on the Central American coast as the first vessel of a regular line of steamers established by a number of enterprising merchants, as the first wave in a well-considered and determined effort to capture the Central American trade. The trade of this country is valuable because of the nature of its products, which consist of the finer woods, silver ore, coffee, etc., and because of the market it furnishes for provisions and manufactures of every kind. The trade properly belongs to New Orleans.

A Cincinnati Commercial correspondent says: "Mr. Emerson, associated with the Howards, carried on business at Madison, Ind., for a few years, when the Howards went to Jeffersonville and Emerson went to St. Louis. He took charge of the ways above St. Louis, and built perhaps a boat or two. He next constructed the ways at Carondelet, and afterwards became interested in a dry dock at Memphis, which was not successful as a speculation. He is at present in St. Louis." Primus Emerson, who is meant, died two years ago. His sons, Thomas and Luther, are carpenters, architects and builders of river craft at St. Louis.

This is from a boatman: Two four-boiler boats run on the Monongahela, between Brownsville and Pittsburg, and their fuel costs only $30 per month. The explanation is this: They burn slack coal, and the mine owners, being prevented by law from dumping it in the river, prefer to put it on flatboats instead of burning it. The steamers referred to each pays a man $30 per month to take care of the flats and the slack. This is one reason why steamers are operated at a smaller expense on the Monongahela than they are at Vicksburg and New Orleans. There is a big difference between paying $150 per day for fuel and $30 per month.

THE LANDSLIP IN INDIA.

Details of the Terrible Disaster at the Hill Town of Naini Tal.

Calcutta Dispatch to London Times.

Naini Tal, a hill station in the Kumaon District and summer headquarters of the Northwest Provinces Government, was, on the afternoon of the 18th, the scene of a terrible catastrophe. In order to understand the details, it is necessary to state that the place differs in one important respect from other Himalayan sanitoria. Instead of being perched on a series of hill-tops, like Simla, Mussoorie and Darjeeling, Naini Tal lies for the most part in a small basin, the greater part of which is occupied by a lake about a mile long and which is dominated on all sides by lofty mountains. Landslips on a small scale have been matters of not infrequent occurrence there, and it has been often pointed out that many of the houses were most unsafe. No serious measures, however, have ever been taken to prevent accidents, and up to the week before last the regular inhabitants and a crowd of summer visitors continued to live in a Fool's Paradise. The station has the reputation of being the prettiest station in the Himalayas. It is the only one in which lake and mountain scenery is combined. Naturally it is a favorite resort of visitors, and up to the day of the accident their numbers were being daily increased by people running up from the plains to spend the autumn holidays in the hills. Rain began to fall heavily at Naini Tal, on the evening of Thursday, the 16th, and continued almost without intermission till noon, on Sunday, the 19th. It is said that the gauge showed a fall of twenty-five inches in forty hours. On Saturday morning the danger first became apparent even to the most careless. A small landslip occurred near the Victoria Hotel, carrying away an out-building and killing an ayah and child. Mr. Taylor, the Magistrate in charge of the station, with a body of police, and a working party from the depot, under Capt. Balderston, Thirty-fourth Foot, Station Staff Officer, immediately repaired to the spot and commenced to clear away the debris, and try to divert the course of a torrent which threatened the hotel and some other houses. The hotel was full of visitors, including Mr. Justice and Mrs. Straight. The warning in the morning gave them all time to seek safety elsewhere, but some, unfortunately, sought shelter in the library—a portion of the assembly rooms building close to the lake. About 1:30 the great catastrophe happened. An eye-witness thus describes it: "A noise, a vision of parting earth and moving trees, a rush of matter toward the lake, a roar of water and falling material, and then a deep brown smoke, rising in slow wreaths through the gloom and furious rain. A great wave of water caused by the precipitation of part of the assembly rooms and an immense mass of earth into the lake, swept across its length some five feet high. It dashed over the sluice gates at the entrance of the gorge with such power as to sweep away several persons standing by them. Sir Henry Ramsey, Commissioner of Kumaon, was all but carried away by the wild rush of the waters."

A correspondent of the Pioneer gives a most graphic account, which I abridge as follows: "At 1 o'clock all seemed well and the working party were busy at their task at the bottom of the precipitous ascent which overhung the hotel. About 1:30 Naini Tal was startled by a sudden and sullen roar, louder than the simultaneous crash of heavy guns, followed by a prolonged rumbling as of distant thunder, and then by an ominous silence. Vast clouds of dust rose heavenward through the murky atmosphere, enveloping in one dense shroud the tract of ground from the hotel to Bell's shop, and onward to the assemby rooms and the lake. The whole place shook as though an earthquake had passed. The waters of the lake rose in a moment far above their usual limit, and swept in a massive wave toward the weir. Then all was still. From the top of the lower spur, under which the Victoria Hotel had stood a minute before, down to the edge of the cricket-ground, nothing was to be seen but a vast expanse of loose earth, beneath which lay buried hotel and garden, road and orderly-room. It was as though some giant had dropped half a mountain on the spot, blotting out in a moment every feature of the scene, filling up the hollows, and reducing to one dead slope all that lay below. Deep below lay the working party. Not a vestige of them was to be seen; only the lone hill-side, silent and dark. Meanwhile, the cricket and polo grounds presented a strange contrast to the gentle sweep above. Toward the pavillion they were intact, save for the streams of water pouring in every direction, but on the other side was simply an enormous mound of vast extent and varying height, a tangled mass of broken walls and roofs, fallen trees, and heaped up earth in horrid confusion, with spoils of the shop and orderly room. Saddest of all was the spectacle of the few corpses that were visible among the ruins. Never was havoc so sudden, more awful, or more complete. Without a moment's warning, without a premonitory rumble to awaken suspicion, down came the enormous landslip, burying in deadly embrace the hotel and the working party behind, engulfing orderly-room and shop, assembly rooms and library, with almost every living soul they contained. Of the number of people in the shop, all save four, of whom three were women, were swept away. A sadder scene I never saw. It was worse than a battle-field."

THE flat fools have been wiped out in Indiana and Ohio. The Greenbackers didn't get a place in the race.

THERE is talk about setting aside the Supreme Court decision in Indiana and having a new election for Governor in November.

IT is sad to be told that the loyal and negro-loving officials of the Republican city of Philadelphia are opposed to negroes in the public schools. May we not pause to inquire: "Was the war a failure?"

THAT sweet little mountainous State of West Virginia, which the Republican party so generously gave the country, stands out like a great rock in a weary land. Her Democratic majority will reach 12,000.

COLFAX is so delighted with the recent vindication of his old Credit Mobilier partner that he now regrets that he so misinterpreted the temper of the American people. He looks upon his eight years of retiracy from public life as a dead loss.

INTELLIGENCE comes from Washington that the Republican managers are now about to make a dash for Virginia, Florida and two or three other Southern States. They certainly won't make the mistake of destroying the solidity of the South. They ought to take better care of their stock in trade.

IN addition to slandering Hancock in his late interview with Fowler, Gen. Grant did not tell the truth when he said that the one vote received in the Democratic National Convention in 1864 had turned the head of the Pennsylvania soldier. The records of the convention show that he was not voted for at all.

OURAY, the deceased Ute chief, left $200,000 worth of property. Mr. Ouray's success in his peculiar line should indicate a new avenue to wealth to the teeming populations of the East. Industry, frugality and a self-cocking revolver will do more for a man in the West than a college education.

AMONG the forty or fifty professional Republican patriots who claim to have done the business in Indiana, Mr. Chauncey I. Filley stands like a veritable Saul among the Prophets. His songs revolutionized the State, and he has modestly intimated to Garfield "that in the event," etc., he will take the Postmaster-Generalship.

THERE is said to be a shocking contrast between the apathy which marks the Democratic headquarters in this city and the activity which prevails at Republican headquarters. This is not to be wondered at. The Republicans, like the cat in New Hampshire, find it necessary to fly around lively when they undertake to trip up the Democracy of Missouri.

INSTEAD of apologizing for the dirty language said to have been recently used by Grant toward Hancock, the personal friends of the Illustrious Citizen are producing certificates and affidavits to prove that he never paid his brother-soldier the manly compliments which were attributed to him a short time ago. There ought to be no difficulty in establishing the fact that Grant isn't a gentleman.

NOVEMBER 3rd has been appointed as the Canadian Thanksgiving Day. As far as an outsider can see into Canadian affairs they must be very grateful for small mercies over there. But then we can't point the digit of scorn at them on that account, for we will express our acknowledgment for favors received next November just as though we had good and sufficient reason therefor. Thanksgiving Day in this expansive country is getting to be like a Friday dinner grace, when the Lord is asked to make us duly thankful, with the distinct impression upon our minds that nothing but a direct providential interposition can do anything of the kind.

MR. SCHURZ is very much alarmed about the attitude of the Colorado Utes. They seem to be on the eve of a co-operative revolt or strike. The poor Indians, robbed, plundered and maltreated for years by the Republican party, were looking anxiously forward to a change this year. When they heard the news from Ohio and Indiana hope died within them. Hence the determination to strike a blow for freedom. We know how to sympathize with the aborigines.

THERE is something exceedingly modest and diplomatic in Schurz's dispatch to De Golyer Garfield. He puts it in the form of a shrinking, delicate inquiry: "Do you accept congratulations on the election in Ohio and Indiana? You have mine cordially." If Garfield should happen to be elected in November, one of his first telegrams will be in the shape of another and more interesting interrogatory. "Are you appointing any men like me to office? If so, consider my application on file. C. S."

CLOSE ALL AROUND.

The latest returns establish the following:

The Republican majority in Ohio will be below 20,000, and probably not much more than 17,000—Foster's majority of last year.

The Republican majority in Indiana will not exceed 6,000.

In both States the Democrats polled a larger vote than in 1876 and the largest they ever polled, but the increase of Republican votes was still greater.

In Indiana the Democrats lose one Congressman, in Ohio three or four. They also lose the Legislature in Indiana, which means Senator McDonald's seat.

The probabilities are that the next U. S. Senate will be a tie, that the House of Representatives will be very close, and that whoever will be elected President will only be elected by very few electoral votes—perhaps only by one.

The great political parties are now pretty evenly divided. It would not be surprising if one vote should elect the next President, and whichever party should control the House and the Senate will do it by very few votes indeed.

GOOD FIGHTING GROUND.

Last year, on the largest vote ever polled up to that time and after a bitter contest, a majority of the voters of Maine deliberetely voted against the Republican ticket. This year the Fusion ticket succeeded for the second time by a still larger vote to defeat the Republican candidate for Governor. The fight was desperate, the vote the largest ever cast in the history of the State, the canvass conducted on national issues and on the election of Garfield or Hancock, and Republicans had their best speakers and biggest guns from other States, as well as bar'ls of money. Still they lost the State. Why should they, with divided resources and their energy absorbed elsewhere, hope to carry that in November what they have now twice lost in September. Colorado gave a Republican majority of 838 in 1876, and a plurality of 2,823 in 1878, but a majority of thirty-nine only over Democrats and Greenbackers combined. Everybody knows that there has been a very large immigration into the mining districts, most of which is Democratic. This new vote, cast for the first time this year, may give the State to the Democrats.

California's majority in 1876 for Hayes was only 2,805, and that was secured by notorious, monstrous frauds.

Connecticut gave in 1876 her electoral vote to Tilden by a majority of 2,900.

Nevada gave a Republican majority of 1,075 in 1876, and 527 in 1878. Garfield's position on the silver question makes him specially weak in this silver State. Besides, Sharon's seat in the Senate is up for sale, and Fair, one of the Bonanza Kings, has gone into a contest for it as a Democrat. The electoral vote will probably go as the Legislature goes, and as Fair has the largest bar'l he will probably win.

Here are five States that present fair debatable fighting ground. If the Democrats can secure only three votes out of these five doubtful States Hancock will be elected, for New York and New Jersey are as certain to give him their 44 votes as the South is to give her 138.

But 138 and 44 make 182, or only 3 less than the necessary 185.

It is the unexpected that always happens. Stranger things have happened than the election of General Hancock would be by just 185 votes. Mr. Hayes was counted in by exactly the same number.

A LITTLE HISTORY.

New York is, historically and traditionally, a Democratic State. At the first election of Washington, in 1788, the State did not vote. In 1792 her vote went to Washington, in 1796 to John Adams. With the beginning of this century the Democratic party came into power. Both in 1800 and 1804 New York's electoral vote was cast for the founder and father of American Democracy—Thomas Jefferson. In 1808 her vote went to Madison, in 1812 to Clinton, in 1816 and 1820 to Monroe. In 1824 the electors were appointed by the Legislature, and twenty-six of them voted for John Quincy Adams and one for Jackson. In 1828 the electors were again chosen in a popular election, and Jackson carried the State by a majority of 5,350 over Clay. In 1832 the Jackson Democracy carried the State again and by the much larger majority of 13,601 over Clay. In 1836 the State refused to be carried away by the general tidal wave for Harrison and the Whigs and gave Van Buren on the Democratic ticket a majority of nearly 30,000 votes. In 1840 the State was lost to the Democrats for the first time by a division in the party. In 1844, however, the Democrats carried the State again for Polk over Clay. In 1848 the split between the Freesoil Democrats and the Hunkers gave the State again to the Whigs, but Cass and Van Buren, the two Democratic candidates, combined had 234,828 votes, or a majority of nearly 20,000 over General Taylor. At the very next election, however, the party was again united, and in 1852 Pierce swept the State over General Scott by nearly 30,000 votes. In 1856 Fremont carried the State overwhelmingly, but only by another triangular fight and division. The vote stood: Fremont, 276,007; Buchanan, 195,878, and Fillmore, 124,604—majority of the combined vote against Fremont over 25,000. In 1860 the Democrats divided and had three candidates; so Lincoln carried the State. In 1864, though Lincoln's re-election was a foregone conclusion, and the Democrats had no hope, they still came very near giving the vote of the State to McClellan. Lincoln's vote was 368,735, and McClellan's 361,089. But that was during the war, with the South out of the Union. In 1868 the State went back to her old record by giving a majority of 10,000 against Grant. In 1872 the nomination of Greeley kept at least 100,000 Democrats from the polls, and gave the vote of the State to Grant. In 1876, upon the largest vote ever cast for both parties, Tilden carried the State by about 33,000. This year the Democracy of New York is more thoroughly united, more enthusiastic, more certain of victory than ever before.

FOUR years ago the Republican managers found it impossible to alarm the business interests of the country. Mr. Tilden, capitalist, railroad manager and friend of monopolists, was a guarantee as the standard-bearer of the Democratic party that no harm would come to corporate interests in the event of a change of administration. This year it was an easy matter to terrify the capitalists and manufacturers of Ohio and Indiana. Gen. Hancock's comparative poverty and his limited connection with trade and commerce were used as an argument against his elevation to the Presidency, though his sobriety, honesty and steady methods certainly qualify him as thoroughly for the executive chair as Grant, who filled it for four years with great acceptability to Mr. Moneybags. It was not alone the expenditure of money and the importation of voters that caused the revolution in Indiana on Tuesday. The Republican manufacturer and business man was induced to take a livelier interest in politics than usual. Thousands of workingmen, who in times of little excitement have been in the habit of going to the polls and voting the Democratic ticket, were forced by their masters, through threats of discharge and intimation of general ruin, to change their politics. That's the true inwardness of it.

REPUBLICAN organs are pointing with pride to the fact that on the day following the Republican victory in Ohio and Indiana there was a general boom in stocks, bonds and securities. They argue that this shows the sympathy between Business and the Republican party. There is no doubt but that there would have been a decline in stocks if Indiana had gone Democratic. That was all arranged for in advance by the Republican manipulators of the Wall street strings. The men who control the thieves' den known as the Stock Exchange in New York City are naturally in sympathy with the Republican party. They can boost or depress stocks at will and this is not the first time that they have used their gambling machinery in politics. The transactions of the Treasury Department have been made to affect business in the same way. The Stock Board can be made to respond as promptly to the requirements of the Republican party as did the Gold Room to the magic touch of the Grant-Corbin ring on that memorable Black Friday in 1869.

A HALLETSVILLE, Texas, desperado named James Buckler turned himself loose upon the town yesterday, and just filled the air full of lead. He opened up all along the line on the Marshal, and when he came out of action and the smoke cleared away it was seen that a valuable buggy horse was literally riddled with bullets. Jim then rode out of town, followed by the Sheriff, but was not overtaken. It is little amenities like these that make life in the Lone Star State full of interest and excitement to the wayfarer.

THOSE people who are buying up railroad tickets by the thousand dollars' worth had better go a little slow. So many tickets have already been sold that the rate heretofore established between St. Louis and Chicago will probably not again be reached for a long time—a year or two if ever. The railroad war now in progress has different features from any heretofore instituted in this part of the country. The unlimited tickets mean that the Wabash is going to break down the rate permanently, and those who have bought tickets with the expectation that in a short time they will realize handsomely upon them will, perhaps, find themselves very well pleased to get back what they have invested.

We hung out our bannah

And discounted the result in a bloviating mannah.

FYTTE II.

We've took in our banner
In Indianer,
And, incidentally, that is what is the matter with Hanner.

ONE of the worst features of the late Republican triumph is that it has brought Eli Perkins to the surface again. He publishes a personal statement in the Chicago Tribune—the only paper in the country mean enough to tolerate him—which is only four inches long and which contains fifteen lies. By using pearl type Mr. Perkins has been known to crowd thirty lies in the same space, but as conspicuity is what is desired, the Tribune frames his carrion in minion.

SOME public-spirited citizen near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, dumped a bag of Paris green into a Barksville well which supplies nineteen families in its vicinity. If a West Pennsylvanian ever touched water this would have fetched some of them, but the result proves that the only vehicle which can get poison enough into a Bucktail to kill him is alcohol, and alcohol alone.

WILL the Republican triumph in Indiana never stop? Not satisfied with putting all sorts of indignities upon a Democratic State, the Prosperity agents have gone and elected a negro to the Legislature—the first that ever entered the Capitol in any other than a janitorial capacity.

A CHICAGO preacher has figured out that the average boy costs $5,000 to grow to the age of fifteen. As far as the Chicago boy goes, and as far as this calculation goes, we can only remark solemnly that he costs more than he comes to.

THE daughter of the Spanish sovereign dozes in a $1,400 cradle; the daughter of the average American sovereign don't put on that much style, but she can get away with enough soothing syrup and paregoric to kill twenty Castilian babies.

SINCE the cut in railroad fares it is cheaper to go to Chicago than it is to stay in St. Louis, but no honest St. Louisan will go to Chicago, no matter what the inducement, unless on compulsion.

All artists may compete, irrespective of nationality, and three prizes, severally of $10,000, $6,000 and $4,000, will reward the best designs. The cost of the monument is not to exceed $1,800,000. This is pretty well for a government that is on the verge of bankruptcy.

DR. JOHN N. TRANK.

A Fine Showing.

From the Philadelphia Times.

It is gratifying to learn that Garfield's birthplace gives a Republican gain of twenty-five. It is small but it is better than nothing. There is Mr. Hayes, for example, who did not make out so well. His home shows a Democratic gain of 63.

By Way of Reminder.

From the New York Sun.

It seems necessary to again remind our Republican readers that, in spite of all appearances to the contrary, Grant is not the Republican candidate for President this year. The name is Garfield.

Salve for Landers.

From the Indianapolis Sentinel.

Hon. Franklin Landers is not an old man by any means, and will be in full vigor four years from now and ready for another joint debate.

What It Means.

From the Chicago Times.

The old guard rejoices. Things look cheery for 1884. Appomattox by way of Vicksburg. The third term after Garfield.

Anna's New Play.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

The cities are complaining that Anna Dickinson has dramatized one of her lectures.

The General Verdict.

From the Kansas City Times.

Landers was a weak sister and should never have been nominated.

OUR FRENCH CITIZENS.

An Exposition of Their Political Status by Consul Karst.

The Majority are Democratic in Their Views, and Will Vote for Hancock.

Among the many absurd rumors promulgated by local Republicans the last few days is one that the French citizens of St. Louis propose to organize a French Republican Club. With this rumor was attached the supposition that the French-speaking people of the city are somewhat unanimously inclined to Republicanism. The idea was new to the American or English element certainly, and on investigation it proves to be equally novel to the French speakers. If there is any movement of the kind on foot it is confined to a few office-hungry persons and is not endorsed by prominent French citizens, or indeed by any considerable portion of our French residents. Several French gentlemen were visited by a POST-DISPATCH representative and every one of them denied any knowledge of such a prospective organization. Mr. Jourdain, the merchant tailor, knew nothing of such a movement, and certainly would did it exist. Several gentlemen spoke very emphatically to the same effect, and characterized the report as the labor of two or three office-hunters, but they refused to have their names published in connection with their remarks. The French people who at all sympathize with the Republican party seem to be those who hold communistic views and would be extremists in their own country.

MR. EMILE KARST,

the French Consul, was seen at his office in the Union Savings Association.

"Have you heard of anything of the kind?" asked the reporter, explaining his visit.

"No, sir. And I do not believe that there is anything of any consequence going on. If there is it was instigated by some person with a controlling desire for a public office. There certainly can be nothing spontaneous about the movement, if there is one, or I would have heard of it. I will venture to say that it will amount to nothing, because the French citizens of any influence are ignorant of anything of the kind, and without them a club would have very little weight or significance."

"What is the respective strength of the two parties in the French element?"

"They are about equally divided."

"Do you know if extreme communistic ideas obtain much here in the Republican portion of the French?"

"Well, I can't say that such is the case. Extreme communism, I believe, has very few exponents here, but there are a good many representatives of the Icarian communism, which was a sort of respectable doctrine."

"As a representative of the French here, what do you think of the relative merits of the two parties?"

"I believe it is to the interest of the French to vote the Democratic ticket. It is particularly so in the West. Because we all desire a treaty of commerce between France and this country which will be reciprocal in its provisions. The Democratic party, I think, is the one most likely to give us something of the kind. There is no use in expecting anything of the kind from the Republicans, because Eastern manufacturers and capitalists are opposed to it, and they just about control the Republican party. France would like to send more wine here, but she is prevented on account of the high tariff. On the establishment of a treaty of reciprocity, she would take her pay for her produce in petroleum, beef, and American manufactures. The French are foolish to support a party which is plainly in direct and pronounced opposition to their interests."

THE NEW CENSUS.

What the Committee Have Done and Have to Do—A Meeting This Afternoon.

A meeting of the Citizens' Census Committee of thirty will be held this afternoon at half-past 4 o'clock in the Mining and Stock Exchange on Third street. The object of the meeting is to hear the report of the Conference Committee appointed some three weeks ago to consult with the Mayor and the city authorities, and also the National Government. This committee, after consultation with the Mayor, appointed a sub-committee which went on to Washington City and consulted with Superintendent Walker and Secretary Schurz. It is well known that they secured the Government's consent to a new census, but it has never been made public what general instructions they received. Secretary Schurz is desirous that a supervisor shall be obtained for this new census who at once possesses the entire confidence of the people of St. Louis as to ability and honesty, and at the same time will be satisfactory to the Government as a man of prominence and a Republican. The Government holds to the opinion that the census of 1870 was grossly incorrect; therefore it desires a supervisor who is in no way committed to the accuracy of that census somebody who has had nothing to do with statistic compiling as based on that census. On this account Mr. Gould is to a certain extent excluded, although his capacity is unquestioned. On the other hand Mr. Schurz does not wish a man to act as supervisor of whom the people can ever say that he was appointed to whitewash Mr. Salomon's report. The Washington committee have no authority to appoint or even to nominate a supervisor. Still, they have been trying for several days to think of some suitable man to do the work, in order to suggest his name to the meeting to-day. As was stated yesterday exclusively in the POST-DISPATCH, Mr. Charles Parsons, President of the State Savings Association, was approached on the subject. Mr. Parsons could only be asked to do the work on the ground of public spirit. He said he would willingly accept the trust but his health was so exceedingly bad that he had been unable for some time to attend to his own regular business. The Conference Committee will, therefore, come before the whole committee this afternoon without a suggestion of a nomination. The plan now is to turn over the matter of the nominating of a Supervisor to the Executive Committee. This committee consists of Geo. M. Samuel, Henry S. Turner, Wm. L. Black, Wm. A. Hargadine and Michael McEnnis. Superintendent Walker has promised to send out some of his most expert clerks and assistants to aid in the re-enumeration. The enumerators must, of course, be St. Louisans in order to satisfy the people of the fairness of their work.

WOOD WORK.

Some Beautiful Carving Now in St. Louis.

"Do you want to see something pretty?" said Capt. Tyler, of Block, Tyler & Co., to a POST-DISPATCH reporter this morning. And after a brief affirmative he led the scribe to the second floor of the sales-rooms, on Pine, between Fourth and Fifth. The long room was filled with rare and costly furniture in which every hue of silk, rosewood and walnut was blended into a striking whole. But it was not to these that Capt. Tyler was referring, beautiful as they were, but to a chamber set which for elegance of design and chastity of execution is far ahead of anything of the kind ever shown in St. Louis. The bed is of the very finest hard woods, beautifully carved and designed, with secret jewel boxes at the foot which cannot be opened when there is a weight upon the bed. Upon the lofty head piece is carved an allegorical representation of night. The horned owls and bats are just getting on the wing. The dressing case, whose central figure is a magnificent mirror with a bevel an inch and a half wide, bears an allegorical representation of morning. The fox is coming from his earth, the birds are singing in the vines, and the bat and the owl are sleeping. All of these carvings are of one piece with the wood. The case is finished with green Spanish marble of great hardness and beauty. The balance of the set is fully in keeping with these two chefs d'œuvre, and even the upholstering of the bed is a work of art. The mattress is an imported one with selected hair, weighing sixty-seven pounds, and the spread is Antigua lace. There is another chamber set of rose wood behind this, one which is also a gem, and a hall tree with a mirror door, which is really a work of art. This hall tree is ornamented with a white holly dog, beautifully cut and seated in a niche composed of twenty-nine different kinds of wood.

The Railroad Fight.

There is nothing new to chronicle in regard to the railroad war to-day, except that there is no longer any desire to purchase Wabash unlimited tickets as a matter of speculation. The POST-DISPATCH of yesterday sounded the note of warning to speculators, and first gave out the information that this market was overstocked for a long time to come. Now it is admitted everywhere that the tickets have no speculative value whatever to the average investor. Numerous railroad men who bought the tickets themselves are now willing to sell out. No unlimited tickets have been sold on speculation to-day, although the company is still ready to dispose of them by the thousand. The limited rates remain as yesterday, or at $2 70 to either Chicago or Kansas City. The travel towards both cities is very heavy, and the trains will go out to-night loaded down. A great many citizens are preparing to run up to Chicago and spend Sunday there, and a better opportunity was never presented. The trains out for Kansas City last night and this morning were very heavy. The Wabash has hauled down its sign of "$1 less than any other line," and now offers only at $2 70. Still a good many tickets are being sold in all the offices at a less figure.

SHAMELESS FRAUDS.

Wholesale Registration of Negroes in the Second District.

Evidences of Crookedness and Fraud—What the Recorder Said.

That a bold and most shameless registration of fraudulent negro voters is being made in the Second Congressional District cannot be doubted in view of the astounding discoveries made by the agents of the Democratic State Central Committee. A visit to the office of the Recorder of Voters at any time during the last week would serve to show the activity displayed in bringing the sons of Ham to a realization of the necessity of registering, and particularly in the Second District. A dozen two-seated wagons are in the service for the use of negroes, and they arrive with their loads of tattered and odoriferous occupants every few minutes. They are not of the resident stripe, but the low-quarter shoes, pants turned up to show the stockings, coarse, faded coats, reinforced pants, blue woolen shirts and frayed, weather-beaten hats show them to be of the roustabout class. Where do they all come from? It is hard to tell. Gus Hohoff, Dr. Bryant, Mr. Smith, Commodore Decatur, Mr. Brown, Gov. Woodson and other shining Republican lights might tell if they would. This morning at one time a POST-DISPATCH reporter counted thirty-three men awaiting registration. Of this number nineteen were colored, and of the remainder not over six were Democrats, if anything can be judged from a citizen's exterior. Many of the negroes were provided with little slips of paper, upon which were written their names and residences(?).

"WHERE DO YOU LIVE?"

asked the reporter of one very dilapidated African. "That's where I live," said the Zulu, as he showed his little slip of paper. The reporter was about to peruse it, when a bright mulatto took it away from the Zulu and said, "What's the matter, Anderson; can't you have no sense. That man's got nothing to do with your business. You wait and show it to the man behind there."

The Zulu put the little slip away, but the reporter lingered long enough to see that he registered as a resident of Heaven alley in Carondelet, and that the slip bore the endorsement of the Assistant Postmaster on duty at the branch office located there. There were three others armed with slips of the same kind. Mr. Gonter swore the negroes as to the length of their residence in each instance.

A TALK WITH THE RECORDER.

Mr. Gonter, ever ready to oblige newspaper representatives, for he is one of the craft himself, entered his private office during a lull in business, and the following conversation occurred:

"How many new voters have you registered thus far?"

"That I have been ordered by the Board and the Mayor not to tell. I was keeping up the total from day to day, until I was ordered to stop."

"How many, then, did you register yesterday?"

"We registered 610 new names and 535 transfers."

"That is 1,145 voters."

"Yes; I am registering new voters faster than the Supervisors can throw them out. They only discovered 378 deaths, removals and not found yesterday."

"What proportion of this additional registration are negroes?"

"More than half, I should say."

"One to look out there would think that it exceeded two-thirds."

"That is only the appearance of things. The trouble is that every negro brought here to register has a body guard of three or four to see that it is done."

"Complaint is made that these negroes purposely and that white men come here and go away without registering rather than stand for fifteen or twenty minutes in such a crowd."

OBSTRUCT THE OFFICE

"There is some ground for that, but it will be remedied at once. At my request an ample detail of police will be on hand from to-day out to preserve order and prevent loitering."

"What about those negroes who come here with slips?"

"Well, in the case of this Carondelet postmaster, I have preserved all of his slips. I have sent a man to verify them. If I find these negroes do not live where he represents them to, I shall have him arrested and prosecuted."

"Of the negro registration, where is it mostly located?"

"They are nearly all coming into the Second and Tenth Wards. If the registration was allowed to go without revision, both of these wards would give large majorities for Rosenblatt. The Tenth would go 600 for him."

"What do you think the negro registration will amount to?"

"I do not think that it will exceed 3,500, and the supervisors will certainly reduce that number."

"Is it a fair estimate that 2,500 out of the 3,500 will be registered in the Second District?"

"Yes, that is about it."

SAMPLE FRAUDS.

From parties on the sidewalk on the outside the reporter gathered a few instances of the frauds being established. A gentleman engaged for the past week in a private canvass of the Tenth Ward finds 1,300 negro voters registered, of whom he could find but a few over 500. He made his report to the Board of Supervisors this afternoon to that effect. He found men registered from vacant lots, school-houses, churches, stone yards, and in some instances ten and twelve from a small cottage. In the Second Ward the canvasser found negro registered from all along the front of the church, Jesuit college and playground, that run from Ninth street on Christy avenue nearly to Eleventh. Twenty-six men registered from a dance hall was doing pretty well. The frauds in this the strongest negro ward were astounding. In the Twelfth Ward, out of a lot of twenty-nine but twelve were found. Two names were registered from the Franciscan hospital, one from St. Joseph's School, two from an empty room, one from a vacant lot at 1316 O'Fallon, and three from the rear of 1314 Biddle street, where there was no building in the rear. Instances of this nature might be given indefinitely. The discoveries are each day reported to the supervisors who have announced their intention of not making the extent of the crookedness known until the work is complete.

THE RECORDER'S OFFICE.

Charles Gonter, the Recorder of Voters, announces that commencing to-morrow evening he will keep his office open until 9 p. m. for the accommodation of working men, until October 22, when the registration ceases and the clerks go to work upon the books. The printing of the poll books costs a pretty figure, the lowest bid received being eleven cents per name. On election day no one not registered will be permitted to vote unless he shall have been unavoidably absent at this time and has not before registered. Transfers cannot be sworn to at the polls.

BACK FROM INDIANA.

The Tenth and Second Ward canvassers, during their investigations, have discovered evidence that is unmistakable that fully 200 negroes left St. Louis on last Friday and Saturday for Indiana, and they commenced to return Wednesday, yesterday and to-day. Their absence was detected in making the re-canvass of the registration made previous to the late primaries.

New Buildings.

H. Koch has been granted permission to erect a two-story brick dwelling to contain eighteen rooms and to cost $4,000, on the north side of Carroll street, between Second Carondelet avenue and Curran street.

A one story brick building to be used as a tin shop and to cost $100 is about to be built on the north side of Laclede avenue, between Beaumont street and Jefferson avenue, by J. H. Ingens.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Spain.

LONDON, October 15.—A dispatch from Madrid says the Government has granted Calix to Garcia and the insurgent leaders of Cuba liberty on parole in Spain. Garcia, in an interview with the Minister of Foreign Affairs, confessed he believed the pacification of Cuba complete. Seventeen thousand men return from Cuba this autumn.

Germany.

BERLIN, October 15.—It is reported that at the session of the Reichstag a motion will be introduced for the reduction of duty on grain by about six pence. A report on the Swiss grain trade states the presence of large imports of American grain and flour received by way of Rotterdam and Antwerp had a very reassuring effect.

Great Britain.

LONDON, October 15.—While Hanlan and Hosmer were practicing Hanlan ran into a bank, injuring his new boat so seriously that he was obliged to walk home. Hanlan went out again in Hosmer's boat.

THE LAND LEAGUERS.

DUBLIN, October 15.—The Crown law officers, at a consultation yesterday, drew up a form of summons against the Land League agitators, to be placed before the higher authorities for approval. A special meeting of the Privy Council, under the presidency of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, considered the matter, but its decision is not definitely announced. The government will not be content with striking at the subordinates. A great land meeting is announced at Tullow, County Carlow, on Sunday next. Parnell and all the leaders have been invited, and are expected to be present.

NEWMARKET RACES.

At Newmarket to-day the third great challenge stakes was won by Thebais, Simnel second and Innocent third.

THE SECRETARY'S LETTER.

The Right Hon. Wm. E. Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland, writing to decline the invitation to the banquet at Armagh, says: The first duty of the Government is the protection of life and property, but no Government ought to ask exceptional legislation until it has exhausted its constitutional powers.

Germany.

COLOGNE, October 15.—The city is splendidly decorated to-day, the occasion being the celebration of the completion of the Cologne Cathedral. Large crowds of visitors from every part of Germany are continually arriving. Gen. Count Von Moltke, Chief Marshal of the Empire, is here. The Emperor and Empress of Germany arrived here. They were enthusiastically received and welcomed by the King of Saxony, Prince Leopold, of Bavaria, Prince William of Wurtemburg, and other royal personages. At 11 o'clock the Imperial cortege proceeded to the western entrance of the Cathedral where it was received by the Dean amidst the ringing of bells and artillery salutes. A te deum was then sung, after which the Imperial procession traversed the Cathedral, and on appearing at the southern entrance there was tremendous and prolonged cheering. The Emperor delivered a short address. A document recording the completion of the Cathedral was placed in the key-stone and the Emperor's standard was hoisted on the steeple the popular enthusiasm is remarkable.

Eastern Europe.

SCUTARI, October 15.—Members of the Albanian League declare their determination to resist the cession of Dulcigno to Montenegro.

NO RESISTANCE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, October 15.—No serious resistance to the cession of Dulcigno is apprehended.

France.

PARIS, October 15.—Gambetta has arrived in the city. President Grevy has decided that the municipal elections shall be held on the 9th of January.

EJECTING THE JESUITS.

TOULOUSE, October 15.—In the ejectment of thirteen Jesuits who had re-entered the college here as professors, a company of foot and mounted gendarmes surrounded the college, and the Police Commissioners broke open the doors and forcibly removed the professors.

South Africa.

CAPE TOWN, October 15.—Maefeling, where Carrington and a small force are besieged, was quite safe up to the 13th inst. A relieving force will leave Weppener on the 17th.

A SUDDEN DEMISE.

Young Mr. Charles Miltenberger Found Dead in His Bed This Morning.

Some eight years ago, down at Grand Tower, Ills., Mr. Charles A. Miltenberger, then a very promising young man of twenty-three years of age, and son of the weell-known and wealthy Mr. Anthony Miltenberger, of this city, met with a very serious accident. As a direct result of this accident, although so long a time has elapsed, Mr. Miltenberger was found dead in his bed this morning at the residence of his father at 3412 Washington avenue.. The accident referred to was a fall of sixty feet from an elevator. The main injury received was upon the front of the skull, which was crushed in at the forehead. Since that time Mr. Miltenberger's brain has been more or less troubled, although he recovered his general health. He has been for some time more or less of an invalid, and has been engaged in no regular business. Still he was of a very hopeful nature and possessed many friends in the city, who will be sorry to learn of his sudden demise. Of late he had been complaining considerably, but was in good spirits yesterday. His regular physicians were Dr. Hodgen and Dr. J. B. Johnson. Last night he was out visiting with some friends and returned home at 11 o'clock in an unusually cheerful frame of mind. He had eaten quite heartily at supper early in the evening. Shortly after 11 o'clock he retired, undressing himself; and this was the last that any of the family saw of him, as he slept alone. At half-past 7 o'clock this morning, one of his brothers went to call him and found him dead in his bed. There was no particular indication about his countenance or condition that he died in pain, nor could it be surmised at what hour his spirit had passed away. In accordance with the law the officials were duly notified and a Coroner's inquest was held at 11 o'clock. The verdict of the jury was that the deceased met his death from convulsions induced by an affection of the brain, brought on by a fall some years previous. Mr. Charles Miltenberger was 31 years of age, and one of the nine children of Mr. Anthony living up to yesterday. The funeral will take place Sunday at 2 p. m. from the family residence.

FOUND GUILTY.

What Mr. Merrick Will Do in the Heumann Case—How the Prisoner Regards the Verdict.

Last night the trial of Conrad Heumann for killing his eighteen month-old child last March was concluded in the Criminal Court, the jury adjudging Heumann guilty and assessing his punishment at fifteen years. Mr. A. N. Merrick, who was the principal attorney for the defense, was met by a reporter this morning and his view of the judgment requested. "We will never give up until the last gun is fired. The verdict was a great surprise to me. But the case will not rest here. The charge of murdering his wife was not heard first, for it was admitted that Heumann was insane, and if he was insane when he murdered his wife, what else could he be five seconds afterwards when he stabbed his child. I will move for a new trial on a number of counts. The foreman of the jury asked in open court could he in his consideration take in his previous knowledge of similar cases. This was allowed him in the charge while the verdict should be based on the testimony and the law. There are a number of other points, on which I will move for a new trial, which I expect will be granted." Heumann was taken back to jail much depressed and surprised by the verdict. He places the utmost confidence in his attorneys, and says he hopes he will not be punished for an act which he committed when he did not know what he was doing.

Cotton Exchange.

The annual meeting of the Cotton Exchange will be held to-morrow, commencing at noon. The report of the secretary and treasurer will be read and other business transacted. The Exchange is in a most flourishing condition now, with new members coming in daily, and the reading of the secretary's report will prove very interesting to the old members who started the Exchange and have seen it and the cotton trade of this city grow to the magnitude it has. A caucus will be held in the Exchange-room, immediately after the meeting is over, for the purpose of nominating a President, Vice-President and Board of Directors for the coming year. The election for these officers will be held next Tuesday. Only members who have paid their dues for the years 1880-81 will be entitled to vote at this election.

CITY PERSONALS.

Paymaster Charles H. Billings, of the Iron Mountain Railroad, started out this morning on a month's tour.

W. R. Crumpton, General Western Traffic Manager of the Wabash, returned from the North this morning.

J. D. Phillips, Fourth street ticket agent of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroads, returned this morning after an absence of eight days in the East.

ON Tuesday and Friday evenings the Garfield and Arthur Club of East St. Louis will meet in uTrabel's Hall, in that city, for the purpose of drilling and perfecting arrangements to go to Belleville on Saturday night to take part in the Republican rally at that place.

On 'Change.

Beerbohm—Spot wheat 1@2d higher; cargoes off coast 6d to 1s higher.

On October 17, 1879, cash wheat sold in Chicago at $1 21⅜ and in St. Louis at $1 35; before October 31 cash sold down to $1 10⅛ in Chicago and to $1 18 in St. Louis, a break of 11⅜c and 17c respectively. This is for the encouragement of the short side. Like Dullstone Flat they must wait for "the turn."

It seems to be the pretty general opinion of grain speculators, not alone here, but in Chicago, that the extraordinary strength and boom in wheat is almost entirely due to speculative manipulation. There is plenty of money at the back of the deal and the parties running the market have proven conclusively that they can do whatever they wish with it. The Adams crowd, of Chicago, are said to be the principal "bulls" in that market. Here the operators are working cautiously, and, although a good many of them believe in still higher prices, few of them are willing to put out a much larger line of shorts at present rates.

The exports of wheat in bushels from the United States and Russia to Great Britain and the total exports from all countries in the past three years were:

	United States.	Russia.	All Countries.
1880	84,639,266	8,998,414	131,123,026
1879	70,412,948	17,386,000	113,565,188
1878	69,955,068	16,466,557	116,048,503

MORNING BOARD.

Flour—Better, stimulated by the jump in wheat. Sellers asking 10c advance, at which buyers were slow to take hold. Demand fair at previous rates. We quote: Fancy $5 50@5 75; choice $5 10@5 25; family $4 85@5 05; xxx $4 50@4 70; xx $3 90 @4 05; x $3 60@3 80; superfine $3 30@3 45; fine $2 80@3 05.

Wheat—A booming market from the lay-off, with great excitement created by a sharp and heavy advance. Telegraphic advices were very strong, reporting rapidly advancing markets almost everywhere, and local speculators went almost wild in their endeavors to purchase. There was some irregularity to prices, but they usually tended stiffly upward. Demand active and pressing for cash grades, with all classes of buyers in the market. No. 2 red sold at $1 03½@1 03⅞; No. 3 red at 96½ @97c this side, 97¼@97⅞ east, No. 4 at 93. No. 2 Mediterranean at $1; No. 3 do at 94@ 95½ this side, 95½ east side. Futures were traded in liberally, but considering the great excitement there was no activity. November sold at $1 04½@1 05¼; December at $1 06⅞@ 1 07⅞; January at $1 07⅞@1 08⅜; October and the year closed at $1 03⅛ bid.

Corn—The strength and excitement in wheat was reactively felt in this market, besides which prices were stiffened by higher markets elsewhere, the consequence being an advance. No. 2 mixed sold at 39⅞@39⅞ and was wanted, but scarce and stiffly held; No. 2 white mixed to order buyers at 40⅛@40⅜; rejected do in Advance brought 38⅛, but 40 bid this side; rejected sold at 38 on orders. Futures were active with principal trading in December and May, and they showing most strength; October sold at 39⅛@39⅜; November at 39⅞@ 40; December at 40@40⅛; year at 39⅛@⅜ to 89⅛; May at 45 to 45⅛@⅛, closing at 45⅜.

Oats—There was not the strength observable in this cereal as in the others, the evident desire of sellers to let go holding prices down a good deal, yet toward the close stiffness cropped out and higher rates obtained. No. 2 for cash sold at 29 to 29⅛ to order, feeding and speculative buyers; No. 2 white was salable at 30⅛, and rejected at 28. Futures remained dull, as operators were indifferent, giving most attention to wheat and corn. November sold at 30⅛, and May at 34⅞@35⅛; bids of 29⅜ for October, 31⅛ for December, 29 for year.

Rye steady and firm, with an order demand for No. 2 at 82½ this side, and 83¼ East; for rejected 78 bid, but held higher.

Hay—Dull, weak and about 50c per ton lower on all grades: Prairie, $9@10; mixed $12@ 12 50; prime timothy, $13@13 50; choice do, $13 50@14; fancy do, $14 50@15.

Millstuffs—Scarce and sellers holding firmly, but most buyers out at present prices. Sacked bran sold on East track at 61c and was salable at mill at 60c. Shipstuffs brought 70c sacked.

Provisions—Steady, with a much better feeling and movement, buyers showing a desire to take hold at present rates. Pork still sold in job lots at $15 75. No lard on the market and fairly quotable at 8@8⅛c with firmer bid. Several round and car lots of loose dry salt meats changed hands. Shoulders at 4.95; long clear at 7.70; clear rib at 7.80; short clear at 8.10; packed shoulders brought 5.15. Fair sales of packed bacon were made at 5⅝ for shoulder, 8.60@8⅝ for clear ribs, 8⅞@8⅞ for short clear. Tallow worth 5⅝@ 5⅞, according to quality.

AFTERNOON CALL.

Wheat—Unsettled, but little changed in value; November at $1 05⅜ to $1 05½@¼; December at $107⅛ to $1 07⅛; January at $1 08; bids of $1 03⅛ for cash, October and year.

Corn weaker. November sold at 39⅞@40; May at 45⅛. Cash salable at 39⅜; October at 39⅛@⅜; November at 40⅛@⅛, and year at 39⅛.

CATTLE—There was a pretty fair demand for all grades of stock except common mixed butchers' stuff and the almost bare pens indeed proved a disappointment to the different classes of buyers who were out in fair numbers and had orders to fill. Total supply some forty car loads, which was about equally distributed between grass Texans and mixed butcher cattle. The former found quick disposal at strong prices and the latter a little slow but by noon the pens were closed altogether, shippers and exporters were ruled out of the market. Reports from New York and other points quite flattering. Stock and feeding steers slow and unchanged. Milch cows with calves slow. Had the offerings of good grades proved ample an active market would have ensued. Yesterday afternoon but little doing for want of stock. Ruling quotations steady.

HOGS—Light shipping hogs of 190 to 230 lbs found prompt disposal this forenoon at strong prices, namely, $4 70@4 85 per 100 lbs and the moderate supply was soon worked off, so by 11 a. m. the pens were cleared. Total offerings were small and mainly of Yorkers and Baltimore. Mixed packing scarce and slow. Heavy hogs in small supply and nominal. Rough hogs and pigs likewise slow.

1880. A MODEL MODERN NEWSPAPER 1880.

THE POST-DISPATCH

Of St. Louis.

DAILY AND WEEKLY EDITIONS]

Consolidation of Three Newspapers in One.

The Evening Dispatch,
The Evening Post,
The Evening Star.

LEADING EVENING PAPER of the WEST.

A Democratic Journal Devoted to the Interests of Missouri.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1880:

The POST-DISPATCH has been and will be a Newspaper in the true sense of the word. It owns the exclusive membership and franchise in the Associated Press. In is in constant telegraphic communion with all parts of the habitable Globe. Its Correspondents are at all the principal Fountains of News, and spare neither Money, Labor nor Brains to be the EARLIEST, the most COMPLETE and the most RELIABLE Historians of the Incidents and Accidents of the Day throughout the World. It will maintain its Excellent Record of being the Most Thorough and the Most Accurate Chronicle of the Local Happenings of St. Louis, enjoying, as it does, facilities for gathering information which are not shared by any other journal in the city.

Editorially it will continue to urge good, old-fashioned Democracy as the only Rational System of Government, and in the coming struggle between IMPERIALISM and FREE INSTITUTIONS it will be found at all times in the lead, fighting the Battle of the People beneath the Standard of Law, Liberty and Local Self-Government. Though Democratic, our Democracy is preceded by an allegiance to Truth and Honesty, and, once convinced that truth to itself or honesty to the public demand it, it has proved in the past that it will spare neither censure nor rebuke within or without the party when it deems them necessary. Its principles are tolerably familiar to the people of the State, as they have been repeatedly and frankly stated, and on every question from hard, sound Money to Western Improvements everybody knows that a definite position has been taken and held.

THE WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH.

The WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH has been established to be to Missour what the Daily is to St. Louis, and the manner in which it has been taken up—evidenced by the surest of all testimony, the subscription list—shows that a progressive, enterprising, live Newspaper can command success in itself, without adventitious aid, and with no recommendation except that of innate and superior merit. The WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH has already become an institution which Missourians cannot afford to do without, for, in the character of its news and the practical value of all its matter, it is almost a necessary household article to every farmer or merchant in the country. The markets are brought down to the very moment of going to press, just a day ahead of any morning contemporary, for, in the nature of things, a paper printed in the morning cannot contain as late news as a paper printed in the evening and going out by the same evening's mail. The importance of this one consideration, were there no other, would be enough to place the WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH far beyond any competitor, for a day's intelligence from a fluctuating market may save or make a business. The Weekly is specially edited to give a complete history of the week brought down to 4 o'clock of the day of issue, each subject having its carefully considered space, and its proper application to the business, the domestic, or the social wants of its readers.

The year of our Lord 1880 opens with a promise of solid prosperity, the like of which has net been known since the War. The piping times of Peace in all their fullness and plenty foster industry and enterprise in the land. Every wheel that turns, and every snare that rolls the mellow loam up to the ripening sun, is driven by the sturdy arm of a citizen whose vote will be cast in this crisis-year either to make this happy promise a permanent reality of true popular self-government, or to see in its stead a sham Republic, with its attendants of a military, personal, centralized Government, eternal sectional strife and certain Mexicanization.

The POST-DISPATCH will appeal during the coming year to the conscience and patriotism of all true Americans who would keep the sacred and revered fires of Liberty alight to rally to its support during a season which will witness the bitterest and the most important Political Canvass which the American Republic has been yet called upon to enter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The POST-DISPATCH will be delivered by carriers to any part of the city or sent by mail, postage prepaid, to subscribers in any part of the Union, on the following terms:

Daily, per week	20 cents.
Daily, per month	85 cents.
Daily, three months	$2 50
Daily, six months	4 50
Daily, per year	9 00

The carriers will collect the city subscriptions on their routes; all subscriptions by mail must be prepaid, and annual subscriptions will not be considered unless accompanied by the money.

And now come a lot of Carondelet lads, four in number, ranging in ages from eleven to thirteen years of age. Their names are Joe McDonald, who holds the rank of Captain, Mike Cassidy, Mike Walsh and Mike Needom. Of late they have played truant from school and from their homes also, having slept in stables and other convenient places. Yesterday they made a raid upon the Commissary Department of St. Boniface School and found a fine store of supplies. They then, it appears, started for the suburb bearing the name New Memphis, and finding the family of Paul Kraft absent broke into the cellar and thence found their way to the upper story. They appear to have had some professional knowledge for among the places reached were the beds, in one of which they found a wallet containing $500. With this and a lot of jelly, bread and other articles, they decamped, but in a few hours were under arrest at the station. This morning Captain Kernett sent them to hold an interview with Mayor Overstolz.

MR. THOMAS ALLEN.

He Tells About His Race for Congress.

A Statement of His Views on the Tariff Question.

A representative of the POST-DISPATCH yesterday called upon Mr. Thomas Allen to learn what he thinks of the political situation in general and the condition of affairs in the Second Congressional District in particular. He was found in his usually pleasant mood and was just in the act of signing an order for 5,000 tons of steel rails, the cost of which will be over $300,000. "These rails," said he, "are for the Iron Mountain Railroad, which I believe I can safely say has been the best commercial friend the city has ever had. They say I am a free-trader and want to ruin the industries of the country. I am willing that my record shall indicate how far I am a free-trader. I think I have done a good deal to build up rail mills, iron furnaces and manufacturies in general. It is rather strange that they should try to get up a cry of free trade on me at this time and just at this juncture. Why did they not raise the same objection to Mr. Clardy in the First District? Why have they not raised the same objections against nearly all the other Congressmen who have gone from Missouri. I have been for thirty-eight years, and have been a devoted friend to our home industries. I have spent money, life and everything for the commercial prosperity of our city. And yet, after all this, I am accused by Mr. Rosenblatt of not being its friend, and I understand that he is now going about among manufacturers trying to persuade them that my free trade tendencies will ruin me for a Congressman."

LABORING FOR THE INTEREST OF ST. LOUIS

"Well, are you a free-trader, Mr. Allen?"

"I am a free-trader just this far, that I believe in a tariff for revenue and that will at the same time give a reasonable protection to home industries. For instance, while I may believe the duty on iron too high, I do not believe in removing it altogether. The tariff should be levied with

JUDICIOUS CARE.

Some things should be admitted free. I believe I made a speech two years ago in which I advocated the removal of the tariff on quinine, so the poor people in the Mississippi Valley could get a necessary medicine at a reasonable price. Protected as it was, the two firms in the United States which had a monopoly of it became very rich. Each one was worth probably $8,000,000, and they loaned some of their money to St. Louis people at 8 per cent and took deeds of trust on their real estate for security. I had some of this money for a while myself. No; I am not a free trader in the sense of no tariff, but I am opposed to high taxes in every form, and do not know that I have any special reason to admire a high collector of high taxes."

This last remark was dropped with a slight flavor of humor.

"Were you

SURPRISED

at your nomination for Congress, Mr. Allen?"

"I was. They came to me and asked me to run. I consented to do so after much begging, but told them I could take no personal part in the contest. I remained in my place in Massachusetts and gave myself no worry about it. I was gratified more than I can express at the vote I received at the primaries. It gratified me because it showed that I had friends among the masses of the people and that my efforts in behalf of St. Louis were not unappreciated. I care nothing for the honor there is in going to Congress, but I care greatly for the good will of my fellow-citizens."

"What do you think of the political situation in general since the Ohio and Indiana elections?"

"I do not think the defeat of Hancock is

FORESHDEOWED,

but, of course, the Republicans feel greatly encouraged."

"To what do you attribute the Democratic defeat in Indiana?"

"Mainly to the unscrupulous use of money, which was poured out for the purpose like water by Eastern capitalists."

Mr. Allen is looking fresher and more vigerous than usual, and is in good condition for the lively contest which he has on his hands.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

A Young Man Accidentally Shot While Hunting Dies of the Result.

About 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon Charles Nahn, eighteen years of age, in company with John Wedeig, was hunting in a skiff at Big Lake, Illinois, when he accidentally discharged his gun, the contents entering the right arm and side. He returned to his home, No. 1604 Montgomery street, and was attended by two physicians. About 10 o'clock last night he died from the effects of the wound. The Coroner will investigate the facts of the accident to-day.

Raiding a Lottery Office.

Officers Monaghan and Belt, of the Central District, have been assigned to special duty, and are doing good service raiding lottery schemes, crap shops and gambling houses. Yesterday they succeeded in effecting an entrance into the office of the Kentucky Lottery Company, on Sixth and Locust streets, a place that has long been under watch, but which the officers have heretofore been unable to raid. About 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon Belt and Monaghan approached the Sixth street entrance. A sentinel stood watch on the street, but before he could give the alarm by getting upstairs he was caught by the officers, who reached the goal first and in the back room found Bernard Russell, George W. Blinn, Thomas Grady and Samuel Watson, waiting for a drawing. The prisoners were taken to the Chestnut Street Police Station, and to-day the cases were called in the First District Police Court and continued until the 15th inst.

Missing.

Two more mysterious disappearances have been reported to the police for investigation. The first is that of Mrs. H. Pange, German, thirty-seven years of age, dark hair, gray eyes. She wore a light-colored calico dress and gray shawl. On last Tuesday she left her home, No. 1002 North Fourteenth street, and has been missing since.

Capt. Lee wants information concerning John B. Wright, aged 16 years, and a son of Mr. James A. Wright, the carriage manufacturer. He is about five feet nine inches high, well built, square-shouldered, and has a noticeable scar on his left forehead. He was dressed in a mixed goods suit of brown color, and sacque coat and blue scarf with a dog's-head pin.

Continued Again.

During the fight between the Union Depot Company and the baggage men, John Cloos, a baggage wagon driver, was arrested. His case has been called in the First District Police Court several times, but on all except one call a continuance was secured by the city. The case is under the management of the Baggage Wagon Drivers' Protective Association, who, through their attorney, Mr. Chas. Nolan, intend to make a test case of it. A number of witnesses in attendance for the defense were considerably riled over another continuance granted this morning. The defense was a trial by jury, and by somebody's neglect no jury was secured, so that on the last two callings the case had to be continued.

The Athletic Tournament.

The initial tournament of the St. Louis Athletic Club will take place at the park of the club, Nineteenth and Pine streets, to-morrow afternoon. A fine programme of sports heretofore published will be followed out. Among the young gentlemen contesting are Larry W. Day, G. I Jones, E. Cole, Ed. Wickham, Frank Bryan, R. Mitchell, J. McNear, M. Dunbar, A. Norton, J. Shepley, A. Shapleigh, A. Tobin, W. Wickham, R. W. Goode and others. One thousand complimentary tickets have been issued.

First District Police Court.

This morning the Deputy Marshal called thirty-six cases in the court. Cases against Jacob Bolz, Henry Ram, Jacob Schaeffer, John Schmidt, Charles Nelson and Mary Eagan were dismissed. Dennis Burns forfeited his bond. The following had their cases dismissed at costs, and the costs stayed: J. S. Roper, Levi St. Amand, Mary McCabe, J. H. Wagner and J. M. Sellers. The other cases were continued.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

Officer Gleyer found Robert Berryman last night considerably under the influence of stimulants. He conveyed him to the headquarters and lodged him in the cooler for the night.

W. E. Jessepps was robbed at the Green Tree Hotel. Mr. Jessepps appeared before Chief Renshaw this morning and informed him that he was robbed of about $35 last night. Upon advice of Chief Renshaw Mr. Jessepps entered suit against Mrs. Hermann, the proprietress of the Green Tree Hotel, for the recovery of his $35.

Yesterday evening James Cotter became so excited over the recent election that he entered a saloon and became drunk. He was afterwards found by Officers Gleyer and Philips endeavoring to raise a fight. They arrested him and preferred the charge of drunkenness and disturbing the peace. Justice Noton fined him $3 and costs this morning.

An important decision was rendered in the Circuit Court a few days ago. For months past considerable difficulty has been experienced by the circulation of many warrants unsigned by the Mayor. The case just decided by Judge Watts was that of Paul Lamar against Mayor Joyce. On the fourth of last April Paul Lamar presented a warrant to Mayor Joyce for $78, for work done for the city. The Mayor refused to sign the warrant on the ground that when the work was done there was no money in the Treasury. Paul Lamar appeared before Judge Watts and entered a "mandamus," and prayed the Circuit Court to compel the Mayor to sign the warrant. The decision just rendered sustains the Mayor, and further instructs him to sign no warrants until the condition of the treasury allows their payment. Many of those warrants have been received by the Treasurer without being countersigned by the Mayor. The decision of the Circuit Court annuls those warrants and holds the Treasurer accountable for all the money paid out.

MR. CHAS. IRELAND, of Chillicothe, O., suffered with rheumatism to such an extent that he was oblige to limp about. One bottle of St. Jacobs Oil completely cured him.

GERMAN BAPTISTS.

Second Day's Session of the Triennial Conference.

What the Divines Have Accomplished—The Proceedings.

The Sixth Triennial Conference of the German Baptist Churches of the United States and the Canadas opened the second day of its proceedings this morning at the First German Baptist Church, corner of Fourteenth and Carr streets. There was a larger attendance of delegates than on yesterday, some having arrived yesterday afternoon too late to take part in the conference proceedings. The regular prayer meeting which will precede all of the daily sessions of the conference was opened promptly at 9 o'clock and was conducted by the Rev. Mr. H. Griep, of Scranton, Pa. Several prayers were made by various ministers of the Conference, the burden of which was the returning of thanks to the Deity for the providential escape of the delegates from accident at the gas explosion which occurred in Stolle's Hall on Biddle street, opposite Fourteenth street, last evening. The majority of the delegates had just finished their dinner when the crash occurred, and there were but few of the members of the conference in the supper hall at the time the disaster took place. Among those were the Rev. H. L. Dietz, of Peoria, Ill., and the Rev. C. Schumacker, of Concordia, Mo. Both of these gentlemen this morning telegraphed to their families that they were safe. At the conclusion of the prayer-meeting the president of the conference, Prof. H. M. Schaeffer, of the Rochester, N. Y., Theological Seminary, introduced Pastor A. Von der Lippe, of the First German Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, who was warmly received by the convention. He responded in a brief address, in which he thanked the delegates for their welcome. Rev. L. H. Downer, of Cincinnati, chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, submitted a report respecting some changes in the constitution of the conference and also read a digest of a letter received from the Rev. Dr. Philip Bickel, of Hamburg, Germany, in which that clergyman speaks very favorably of the progress made by the religious publication and other societies of the German Baptist denomination in Europe. To-day the question of appointments of the faculty and trustees for the Theological Seminary at Rochester, New York, for the ensuing three years was taken up and settled. Also the arrangements for the same period of the affairs of the Academical School in the same city were made. This afternoon the Rev. Fritz Fliedner, Missionary to Spain, the son of the renowned Fliedner of Kaiserwerth, Germany, the founder of the Diaconissen Institute in Germany, who had been invited to do so, addressed the conference. At 7:30 this evening the Rev. J. C. Grimmell, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will preach in the church, and as he is well known in this city as a pulpit orator, it is expected that the attendance will be very large. The conference has yet a very large amount of business to transact, but it is so far being proceeded with in an expeditious and business-like manner.

A Fast New Orleans Steamer—A Remarkable Trip.

The W. P. Halliday arrived early this morning from New Orleans, having made a remarkably fast trip, the like of which is far from being usual. Her time from port to port was five days fifteen hours, and yet she towed a barge from Helena to St. Louis. It would thus appear that her owner, who designed boat and engines, was correct in his assumption that there is value in great length of stroke of piston as compared with the diameter of the cylinder. Capt. Emerson Gould, Jr., was in command, and the fact will be remembered. The Halliday will leave for New Orleans to-morrow in place of the Golden City.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Democratic City Central and the Republican City Central Committees will meet this evening.

The two central committees have agreed that the tickets for use in November be headed by the Sheriff.

A number of these cars are perfectly new, while all are as bright and clean as paint, varnish and upholstery can make them. A smoking car will also in a few days be placed upon the morning and evening runs, and if it should prove popular, more smoker's will be placed upon the road. The management of the Bellefontaine Railroad merit the just popularity of that road.

Death of Stanley Ryland.

A telegram from Arkansas City from Al. Huer to his brother George, in this city, states that Stanley Ryland died yesterday at 5 p. m. Deceased was well known to boatmen and the business community, and was held in high estimation on account of his geniality, fine conversational powers and business abilities. His father, E. M. Ryland, was one of the most successful merchants of St. Louis, and for several years held the honorable position of President of the Merchants' Exchange. Stanley entered upon a river career on the Missouri at an early age as second clerk and served on the finest boats then running. For a while he was connected with a large commission house in New York, the proprietors of which had sought his valuable services and paid him an exceedingly liberal salary. He returned West, and went on the river again, feeling happier afloat than he did in the most lucrative position on shore. For some time he was on one of the famous New Orleans and Vicksburg packets, on which, as well as on other boats, he was conspicuous by his splendid physical proportions and attractive manners. For some years he has been in railroad employment, and as popular as ever at Arkansas City, where he was brought in daily contact with his beloved steamboats and steamboat friends.

Stanley Ryland was a cousin to Xenophon Ryland and brother, lawyers of Lexington, Mo., and the deceased Judge Ryland, of the same place, was his uncle. The death of Stanley Ryland will be generally lamented. It would be truth to say, a finer fellow never lived.
